Christian Missionary Society Plans Luncheon

The Women's Missionary society of the Christian church met in the church parlors Wednesday afternoon for business session in an attractive setting of spring flowers. The president, Mrs. Allen Curry, presided and plans for a luncheon and birthday party were announced for the first Wednesday in May. All members are invited.

The worship period was led by Mrs. H. J. Berrian, who read from John 9:1-23 as fitting the theme, "Now I See." The presentation hour was led by Mrs. R. L. Ray and group. A splendid program had been prepared on "Harvest in China." Mrs. Ray gave a short introductory talk, speaking of the fruits of the harvest, of the changed homes, and lives of individuals after Christianity has been accepted. A dramatization, in which a Chinese mother talks with her two daughters about the old days and the new was ably given by Mrs. Ruth Hood, as mother. Mrs. James Grigsby and Mrs. Hooper were the two daughters. All were dressed in Chinese costumes.

A group of monologues on "My Life as It Is and as It Would Have Been" was given by Mrs. Mabel Marsh, Mrs. P. C. Latham and Mrs. C. Pierce. Rev. W. R. Baird closed the program hour by singing "Somebody Knows." A social period followed and refreshments were served to 25 members and five guests.

Levy Pupils Please Many Sunday Afternoon Recital

A large and appreciative audience enjoyed the recital yesterday afternoon by pupils of Victor Levy, violin instructor of the Institute of Musical Education, who were presented at the First Christian church. A variety program of orchestra music and solo numbers filled the afternoon with very pleasing entertainment.

Two orchestras were presented, together with violin solo, duets and quartets. The work of the advanced pupils was especially well received by the audience and the progress of the beginners won words of praise from all followers of musical training. Those who had attended previous recitals of the Levy pupils, had much to say in commendation of their advancement during the past short period of work, complimenting Mr. Levy upon his splendid accomplishment in the interests of younger musicians.

SILVER AND WHEAT TO BE TALKED AT WORLD CONCLAVE

WASHINGTON, April 10.—(AP)—Secretary Hull indicated today that among the subjects to be taken up in the Washington conversations with leading statesmen of other countries in preparation for the world economic conference would be restoration of the price of silver and control of wheat surpluses.

The silver question, he said, is now figuring in the Anglo-American discussions carried on through Sir Ronald Lindsay, British ambassador.

"The solution of developing new and enlarged industrial uses for silver" is emphasized as worthy of careful consideration in the formal agenda for the economic conference. Also advocated for consideration is possible improvement of methods of marketing the metal by producers and currency authorities.

Other possibilities are increased use of silver as coins by the principal nations; and purchase by leading countries now on the gold standard or desiring to return to it, of a stipulated amount of silver to be added to the reserves of central banks.

Hull emphasized, however, that nothing resembling decisions have been made in the Anglo-American conversations.

MISS STEARNS IS LEADING LADY OF HIGH SCHOOL PLAY

In preparing for the presentation of "A Pull House," the senior play cast is striving to perfect their production by the middle of May when the play is to be given in the high school auditorium.

Every year the senior class presents a play in which the cast is represented by seniors. "A Pull House" is this year's production.

The play has a cast of fourteen members, seven boys and seven girls. The cast has been giving several hours daily to the play under the guidance of Miss Ridings and Ralph Bailey, directors.

Katherine Stearns is very capable in the feminine lead with Max Rex upholding the male role. Miss Stearns has been very active in dramatics and other school activities.

A delegation of Crater Lake Christian Endeavor officers and representatives held a special meeting in Rogue River Sunday evening, April 9, with Marion DeVries leading. It is planned to visit a number of societies in the near future and give model meetings.

The Rogue River society, recently organized, is rapidly growing in numbers. The group won second place at a rally in Ashland a week ago. They had an entry in the dramatization contest, winning second place there also.

Last night's program consisted of Norman Fraley leading the song service; Marion DeVries in charge of the meeting; William Vilman, Jerry Latham, and Norman Fraley gave special talks with the members of the society giving answers to questions.

The delegation is as follows: Norman Fraley, Medford; Jerry Latham, Medford; Helen Smith, Butte Falls; Jeanette Stearns, Ashland; Mr. Pahl, Medford; Alice Pahl, Medford; Naomi Fraley, Medford; Louise Ladd, Medford; Alta Pahl, Medford; and Adrian Fraley, Medford, and Marion DeVries of Phoenix.

Southern Oregon Writers And Artists to Organize

By Maud E. Pool.
That creative ability often lies obscure behind some peculiarity, as in the instance of Walt Mason, who can write, but who once lay on his back to paint the under side of a wheelbarrow, was the thought brought out by Mrs. Agnes E. Hines before a group of Medford people assembled at the Holland Hotel Wednesday who organized the Medford branch of the League of Western Writers. "It may be an old man mining along a mountain trail," declared Mrs. Hines, but it doesn't pass him up."

It is this thought closely interwoven in the aims of the league which will come to mean much to Southern Oregon writers and artists who become affiliated with the organization, and it will go far toward making Medford and vicinity outstanding in the way of creative art.

The Medford group elected the following officers: Mrs. Atlanta Parker Satchwell, president; Mrs. Alice Coppin, vice-president and Mrs. A. V. Graves, secretary. Other charter members are Mrs. Geraldine F. Adams, Mrs. E. E. Gray, Mrs. John Peter, Miss Maude E. Pool, Victor Tengwald, and Ernest Rostel. (The latter two already are members of the national organization.) The charter will be left open for the first few meetings in order that others interested may take advantage of charter membership.

The second meetings probably will be held this week. Mrs. Hines is enthusiastic over the future of the local branch and wished it to be known that membership is open not only to writers, but to musicians, composers, artists, and all other people interested in creative art. Those not sufficiently advanced in their work to become members are eligible to associate membership. One of the chief aims of the League of Western Writers is to discover and promote talent which lack of encouragement or assistance has kept concealed, and to aid in the marketing of productions, whatever type they may be. The "Rogue River Valley Writers" will be helped to achievement through the historical background furnished by the president, Mrs. Satchwell, who is a pioneer of Western Writers. She has much of the history of pioneer days in Oregon contained in articles published in the Portland Oregonian years ago. She has painted Crater Lake from the rim 112 times, the painting of this scenic wonder being her specialty, and has found world wide sale for her work. The Medford group, with a long list of creative artists throughout the county in view, expect to gain a fast-increasing membership.

Mrs. Hines has inferred the fascination of discovering, through varied and unexpected channels, the unusual work of local residents just since her arrival here.

Mrs. Hines hopes to create further interest throughout the state, knowing that new writers with the direct help that the league can give will be able to put Oregon on the map in a manner never before accomplished. The League of Western Writers is nationally known, and was organized at Seattle six years ago, according to Mrs. Hines, Oregon executive, and publicity chairman, who devoted a large portion of her time to describing the background and history of the society. Portland, Salem, San Francisco, Long Beach and other cities of the west have branch organizations. She stressed an underlying spirit of broad mindedness and co-operation as the basis of success in the work, and the advancement of the league as a whole, and emphasized the necessity that Medford people "wake up" to the splendid opportunities at hand.

"If you have something nice to say about Crater lake or anything else, don't be afraid to tell the world," she encouraged her listeners. National convention will be held at Long Beach next August, and Oregon has the convention for 1934, which will convene at Portland.

Mrs. Hines, well known for her song poems, and motion pictures based on scenic attractions and industries of the Pacific coast, came to Medford three weeks ago, primarily as a result of the illness of her brother, J. H. Devin, and has devoted her spare time to the advancement of her pictures, as well as to that of the western writers. This author, who centers her interest in the motion picture studios for the study of technique when in Hollywood, voiced her disapproval at Wednesday's meeting of the popular type of movies, and announced her ambition to raise the standard of pictures, which was commended by the local group of writers. She gave a glimpse of one phase of her work when she mentioned California's impression of Crater lake:

"Why, yes, Crater lake is right up here in northern California. Just a few miles, and a beautiful place," they told her.

"There's plenty to do in the northwest, Mrs. Hines stated, when telling of the queer story of Oregon's prized wonder. Later she mentioned California's willingness to co-operate with her neighbor to the north, and added that the sunny state is misunderstood. Some of this writer's films have gone to England, the British producers being anxious to help sell their Douglas fir in Canada, and as a result it is understood that Canada sells more fir than Oregon. Pictures of the Canadian timber have been sold in Hawaii, and the islands have purchased the fir.

With a note of feeling in her voice Mrs. Hines spoke of the unusual beauty of the almond blossoms here, adding that her section of the state does not possess this type of tree. She also is impressed with the grandeur of Mr. McLoughlin, and intends to feature these assets in her stories, as well as the city reservoir and the million dollar water. During her stay here she already has written stories of the blue grass, the pearls of the Rogue River valley tomatoes, and the Medford ice, which she understands is 100 per cent pure.

"I want to use local talent in my pictures," the author stated in reviewing the numerous possibilities of featuring Medford in her work. "If I can find singers or musicians, little tap dancers, or children who will film well, I will use them instead of sending for up-state talent."

Mrs. Hines, who may remain here until Easter, mentioned that Forest Grove, her home town, and known as the "Daffodil City," soon will have thousands of visitors from Portland and elsewhere to view its daffodils.

THE BEER DRESS MAKES DEBUT

The return of beer has, among other things, influenced styles. This frock was called a beer dress by Chicago business men who introduced it at a recent style show. Its connection with the return of beer is based on the pretzel necklace and barrel sleeves. Dorothy Barkman is wearing the costume. (Associated Press Photo)

LAW TECHNICALITY DELAYS TRIAL FOR PRESCOTT SLAYER

By the end of the week, and the trial date set.

Thomas L. Brecheen, claimant of "25 years personal friendship with President Roosevelt," Oliver Martin and Joseph Croft, indicted for the slaying of Prescott, entered pleas of not guilty this morning.

Banks and his wife, under guard of three husky state policemen and Chief Jailer Fred Kelly, entered the courtroom through the judge's chambers shortly after 11 o'clock. They took seats among their attorney, Banks was dressed in a freshly pressed light colored spring suit, with a diamond pin in his necktie. Jail attendants said he spent most of the morning preparing for the courtroom appearance. Outside of paleness, and loss of jauntyness, there was no noticeable change in the man. He smiled wanly upon the well filled courtroom.

Glances at Crowd
Mrs. Banks was dressed in black, and as soon as seated started a conversation with counsel. Her husband had little to say, but cast many sidelong glances at the crowd.

The proceedings, as far as the Banks were concerned took less than five minutes, and they then were ordered back to their cells.

The courtroom crowd was limited to the seating capacity. A few people lingered in the hall, which was under guard of special officers. Among the early arrivals were Mrs. Henrietta E. Martin, president of the "Good Government congress," and catapaw of Banks, accompanied by her father, C. H. Brown, and Mrs. C. H. Brown. Mrs. Martin wore a new hat.

Court was delayed an hour, owing to auto trouble, and Judge Duncan reached the bench an hour late.

EVAN REAMES IN LINE FOR FEDERAL BENCH IS REPORT

PORTLAND, April 10.—(Sp.)—Evan Reames, an outstanding Democrat of southern Oregon, may, if things go right, be appointed judge for the ninth circuit. The circuit consists of Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana, California, Arizona, Nevada, Alaska and Hawaii. There is a vacancy on the bench, and all signs point to it being filled by someone from the Pacific northwest. This judgeship is the fattest piece of patronage that President Roosevelt will bestow in the northwest, for it carries a salary of $12,000 a year.

Washington has two aspirants for the position, Frances J. Garrecht of Spokane, and Samuel B. Hill of Waverly, Wash., a congressman. The House delegation from Washington is solidly Democratic and Representative Hill is the dean of the delegation, for he alone was re-elected last November. Supporting Garrecht is United States Senator Dill, who was one of Roosevelt's pre-convention supporters.

If the Hill and Garrecht contest comes to an impasse, Evan Reames of Medford may be the compromise. The Oregon delegation cannot do much for Reames as the situation now stands because both of Oregon's senators are Republicans and have no political influence at the White House, and it is within the range of possibility that the Oregon Democratic lawyer may be captured the plum.
