WARD'S LAUNCHES BIG SALES EVENT TO RUN FOR WEEK

Two page advertisements, in two colors, appear in today's Mail Tribune, announcing some of the special merchandise values offered during Ward Week, now being featured at the Montgomery Ward Company of this city. Today preliminary to the great Ward Week sale, the organization of the local store is observing "courtesy day," giving southern Oregon and northern California shoppers an opportunity to inspect the fine showing of merchandise secured for the big event. Officially, the Ward Week sale will be launched Friday and will continue until Saturday, April 29.

Some interesting facts concerning the preparation and actual staging of this spring's big Ward Week sale were given by C. D. Bean, manager of the Medford store. According to Mr. Bean, six months were spent in preparing for the big eight-day event which will result in savings of more than a million dollars for American shoppers. With additional thousands of salespeople employed throughout the United States in Ward stores, the sale this spring has an added significance in relieving the unemployment situation from coast to coast.

Scores of specially trained Ward buyers, after having carefully surveyed the markets of the world, started placing orders months ago. During the past 60 days every principal furniture factory on the Pacific coast has been running at full capacity filling orders for this event. More than one and a half carloads of special furniture has been received in Medford alone, giving an idea of the tremendous buying power Wards have used in this nationally famous sale. Transportation, too, will receive a substantial impetus as a result of Wards' countrywide sales activity.

The new car Young was driving, according to state police, was stolen from Rockford, Ind. Young told the officers that he had picked up the McDonalds in Rawlins, Wyo. McDonalds wrote a statement for officers, saying that he had been sent from Visalia, Calif., to McNeil's island in 1932 for a two-year term for violation of the Dyer act. He served a year and nine months, he said. Young was sentenced to a reform school for vehicle stealing for a term of one to ten years, and at the present time is on parole, he told the police.

The article by the local physician describes his findings in the treatment of 35 practically identical cases of two years' duration. The successful treatment, which followed findings, is also revealed in the article by Dr. Inskeep. It involves the giving of custom preparations. Dr. Inskeep is now working on a new treatment for epilepsy, which he has been using successfully with patients for some time. An article describing the treatment will appear in about three months.

AUTO TRANSIENTS HELD FOR THEFT HAVE PEN RECORD

Mr. and Mrs. George E. McDonald and James Clarence Young, alias James Huston, auto transients appeared before Justice of the Peace William R. Coleman this morning charged with grand larceny, viz. the theft of a radio, radio books, and valise belonging to Fritz William Mayer. Young waived preliminary hearing, and will appear before the next grand jury. The McDonalds requested a preliminary hearing. They have no funds and will be their own lawyer. The trio were arrested yesterday afternoon in Siskiyou county.

Mayer says that he was hitch-hiking from Seattle south, and that near Oregon City the accused trio gave him a "lift." They dropped him out near the court house here, while they sought gasoline from the Red Cross. They promised to return, but did not, and left southward with his radio and other property. He told the state police and the transients were apprehended in the Siskiyou.

THREE LADS GET ANOTHER CHANCE IN JUSTICE COURT

Three young men — Alva (Sonny) Mansfield, 19, of Ashland, and Joe Dallaire and Richard Tilley of this city, were extended leniency, after lectures this morning by Justice of the Peace William R. Coleman. All have been before local courts before, and have been beneficiaries of paroles.

Mansfield was charged with contributing to the delinquency of a minor girl. A friend wanted to take him to his ranch near Centralia, Wn. but Mansfield said he had a chance at county highway work. He told the court he had been receiving supplies from the county commissary, to aid in the support of his mother and sister.

The district attorney's office informed the court that the 15-year-old girl had "swooned" to Ashland to meet Mansfield, that she remained out until past midnight to attend dances, and played hockey from school. Furthermore the official said the pair would "make a spectacle of themselves by embracing and kissing in front of all the kids at a local school."

Mansfield told the court that when in trouble last year with a Phoenix girl, he had seen her no more, "because her father threatened to shoot me if I came around." He admitted the threat had dampened the romance.

It developed that the father, in the present case, after seeking the warrant, had declined to prosecute.

"You are headed for the penitentiary, and will make it, if you don't mend your ways," the court told Mansfield. "You are evidently eating off the county, and it's up to you to work out the relief, and behave yourself like a man. The court will continue your case, but if you show up here again, it will be a different story." Mansfield promised to mend his ways.

Dallaire and Tilley, charged with petit larceny, were granted leniency on recommendation of Chief of Police McCredie. Tilley intends, the police say, to enlist in the forest army. He was paroled a year ago, with Dallaire, following entering DeVoe's. The authorities described Dallaire as "a good little worker and hustler who helps his mother." He has a "bad boy's heart," the court was told.

The justice of the peace talked kindly and firmly to the lads, and then suspended any action pending good behavior. They were warned not to "appear again in this court."
