

32 COUNTIES ON BENEFIT SIDE OF HIGHWAY LEDGER

Jackson Receives $1,944, 300 More in Road Work From State Funds Than Contributed—List Others

PORTLAND, Ore., May 12.—(AP)—Four counties—Multnomah, Marion, Washington and Linn—have contributed more money to the state highway fund than they have taken out in road work, according to a chart prepared by the Oregon state highway commission.

The graph, as explained by Leslie M. Scott, chairman of the commission, shows that Multnomah county, for example, is $34,156,000 "behind" while Douglas county is $7,362,500 "ahead" in the matter of contribution and benefit.

Marion county has paid in $4,246,400 more than it has taken out. Washington is $623,700 behind, and Linn $190,000 behind.

Scott explained that the $7,362,500 which Douglas county has gained marks the difference between the $9,530,800 spent in highway construction or maintenance in that county, and the $2,168,301 it has contributed to highway funds through license fees, gasoline tax and motor transportation fees.

Among the 32 counties which have received in highway work more than they have paid in, with the amount of excess, are:

Lincoln, $5,045,500; Curry, $4,082,900; Wasco, $3,825,000; Lane, $3,819,700; Umatilla, $2,923,600; Klamath, $2,870,800; Baker, $2,710,600; Josephine, $2,688,200; Union, $2,143,000; Jackson, $1,944,300; Polk, $1,028,700. Yamhill received only $336,100 more than it contributed.

ROSEBURG, Ore., May 12.—(AP)—

Commenting here today upon the distribution of state highway funds as announced by the highway commission, showing Douglas county heading the list in contributions proportionate to the amount paid in, Douglas County Judge W. S. Hamilton called attention to the fact that Douglas, largest in area in western Oregon, contains one-third of the entire length of the Pacific highway within the state of Oregon, and more of the Oregon Coast highway than any other county, which in a large measure accounts for the apparent extremes in the scale of receipts and expenditures.

Because of favorable routes, two roads from the Pacific highway to the coast are maintained by the state, one from Roseburg to Coos Bay and the other between Drain and Redport.

In addition to these highways maintained by the state, Douglas county has a longer system of improved roads than any other county in western Oregon.

ANNUAL REVIEW TO DRAW CROWD

It is expected that several thousand people will witness the second annual review and presentation of service medals, and demonstration which will be held at the Medford armory next Tuesday night.

Elaborate plans for the event are going forward and over a hundred invitations have been mailed out to military, state and county officials throughout the state. Recently the army adopted an entirely new method of drill and this will be displayed to the public for the first time.

An entire battalion of troops will be on the drill floor of the armory, comprising the units from Ashland, Grants Pass and Medford. Major William H. Ellenburg is in charge of the event, assisted by Captain Carl Y. Tengwald.

TALK ON CRATER LAKE DRAWS INTEREST AFAR

Far across the continent to Chazy, N. Y., fragments of a KMED broadcast on Crater Lake traveled last month, a letter recently received by D. E. Libbey, park naturalist and assistant superintendent of the park, reveals.

On April 20 Mr. Libbey spoke over KMED. A response to the address was recently received from Lillian Francis of Chazy, asking for more information on winter conditions at the lake. Miss Francis stated in the letter that she had visited Medford and Crater Lake and would like more facts concerning the geology of the park. The April issue of Crater Lake Nature Notes was forwarded her on May 10 by Mr. Libbey.
