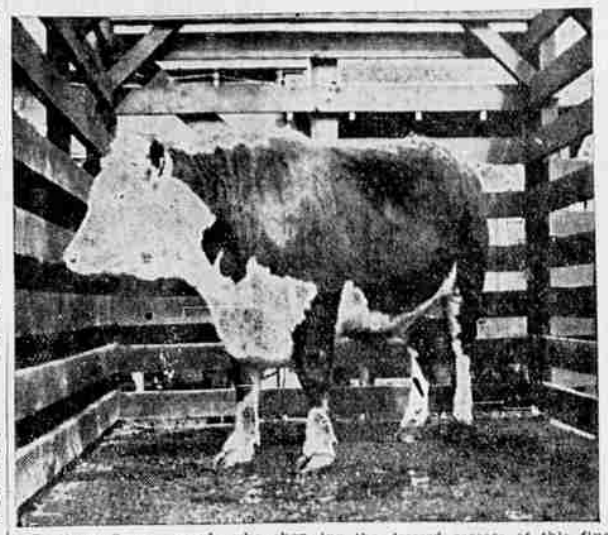
Fine Beef to Be Shown Here



Southern Oregon people who shop at the Peerless Market tomorrow and next week will be interested in seeing the dressed carcass of this fine 1260-pound steer which was recently purchased by the Rogue River Meat company of this city from Mrs. Mike Hanley's ranch on the north Pacific highway. This steer was sold for more than $100, according to Herb Meusel, showing that ther is profit in the raising of high quality beef cattle.

This animal was given special feed and prepared for exhibition at the Pacific Livestock exposition. However, it was secured by the Rogue River Meat company and will be sold to Rogue River valley heat users the latter part of next week.

"Never before, in my wide experience in all sections of the United States, have I dressed as fine an animal as this Hanley steer," Jack Burrows, in charge of the Rogue River Meat company's slaughterhouse, said yesterday. It is without question the finest steer ever displayed by the Peerless Market, according to Herb Meusel.
