

NEW POLICY FOR HUNT'S THEATERS STARTING MAY 17

George Hunt, owner and manager of the Rialto and Craterian theaters, announced today a new policy for both houses, effective tomorrow at the Rialto and Thursday at the Craterian.

The Craterian will show the "cream of the crop" in a manner of speaking, using only the very best pictures available and for longer runs than has been the policy for the past two or three years. Where the policy of the house has been three complete changes each week, hereafter there will be only two, thereby allowing everyone a chance to see the shows.

Some of the pictures soon to be shown at the Craterian are "The Picture Snatcher," with James Cagney; Maurice Chevalier's latest release, "A Bedtime Story"; Mary Pickford in "Secrets"; "Tugboat Annie," which brings Marie Dressler and Wallace Beery together again; "Forty Second Street," Warner Brothers' smash musical revue with Warner Baxter, Ruby Keeler, Dick Powell, Bebe Daniels and a host of other stars; and a long list of other notable attractions.

The Rialto theater, for a long time a favorite with show-goers, will inaugurate a straight first-run policy, showing pictures from all the leading producers. The first picture in the new policy at the Rialto is "Out All Night," starring Slim Summerville and Zaou Pitts in the third of their co-starring comedies. It has been said that this latest picture surpasses even their two previous vehicles, "The Unexpected Father" and "They Just Had to Get Married," both of which hung up box-office records wherever they were shown.

"The reason for the change in policies for the two theaters is quite obvious," said Mr. Hunt, "and we intend bringing to Medford the very best that the entertainment world has to offer in an effort to make the two theaters once again knock all up and down the coast for the superior entertainment offered."

Besides bringing the best product available for showing in our two theaters, we also intend making changes in the equipment, bringing it up to date, and otherwise making the theaters modern in every respect. "The Working Man," which we are now showing at the Craterian, and which has, incidentally, been making a decided hit with everyone, is only the beginning. Other big pictures will follow. The producers in Hollywood realize that the days of any old thing bringing crowds to the theaters is a thing of the past—that people are demanding better shows. The result is that all the major studios are putting forth all their efforts and a great deal of their money into better stories, more careful direction, the right casting of stars and all the other details that go to make good pictures."

C. FEHL BLAMED IN CAR SMASHUP

Calvert L. Fehl, assistant editor in charge of the Pacific Record Herald, was driver of one of the automobiles which figured in a crash on the Pacific highway one mile north of Grants Pass Sunday. Henry E. Buchanan of Chehalis, Wash., was driver of the other automobile, according to accident reports filed in Grants Pass Monday.

One girl occupied by Buchanan's car suffered a broken leg, another woman received lacerations on the head, and a boy in the car was shaken up. Buchanan's report asserted that Fehl's car swerved in front of him when Buchanan attempted to pass Fehl. He said his only alternative from hitting Fehl was to turn up over the bank, which overturned his car. Fehl said he did not swerve in front of the passing car, but that it suddenly dived up the bank as it got opposite him.

BRAY UNWILLING BANKS WITNESS

Dr. Jouett P. Bray, who appeared in the Banks trial yesterday as a witness for the defense, returned today and wished the Mail Tribune to explain why he had told Arthur Perry, this paper's correspondent at the trial, that he would not take the stand as a witness, a fact printed in this newspaper.

"When I told Perry I would not be a witness," said Dr. Bray, "I had been told that by the lawyers for the defense. Later, the lawyers had a consultation and decided to use me. I don't want anyone to think I purposely misrepresented the facts. I did not want to appear as a witness."

New Holland Chef Pleases Patrons

Patrons of the Hotel Holland are enjoying many innovations in the food served there since the catering department has been in charge of R. J. Limle, capable chef, who has been employed by several large hotels throughout the country previous to locating in Medford.

In an effort to place the Hotel Holland's dining service on a par with that of larger city hostesses, Mr. and Mrs. Reynolds have secured Mr. Limle who is specially fitted to prepare food for banquets, card parties and private parties, they stated today.
