POOR REPUTE OF BANKS TOLD BY MANY WITNESSES

EUGENE, Ore., May 17.—(AP)—The state drew near the end of its rebuttal testimony in the trial of Mr. and Mrs. Llewellyn A. Banks here today as a series of character witnesses took the stand. Each testified that Banks, ex-Medford publisher, had a poor reputation for "truth and veracity" and as a law-abiding citizen. Each also testified that George J. Prescott, Medford constable, had a good reputation as a "mild mannered man, not quarrelsome."

McKittick On Stand Wesley McKittick, of Medford, one of the two other rebuttal witnesses, took the stand and denied having heard Prescott threaten the life of Banks. McKittick said he has been in jail on the basis of the indictments. He denied being a "sort of assistant jailer" and said he is the jail cook.

Say Banks Poor Citizen Character witnesses included Mrs. Rose Guthrie Schiefelin, Medford club woman; W. O. Webster, Medford contractor; Alfred C. Burch, ex-member of the state board of higher education; Marie M. D'Albini, Medford clubwoman; O. O. Alenderfer, Gates, another ex-mayor. All said of Medford; and C. E. ex-mayor's reputation was bad and that Prescott had threatened Banks' life. This testimony was ordered stricken from the records, however, as not being competent rebuttal testimony.

Attorneys In Tiff Ralph Moody, chief prosecutor, and Frank Loneragan, chief of defense, amused the courtroom when, following a heated debate across the table, Loneragan shouted, "Mr. Moody, don't shake your fist at me because I don't like it."

DICKIE MOORE IN "NO GREATER LOVE" A story that exemplifies man's humanity to man is presented in "No Greater Love," which opened at the Roxy theater this afternoon. The cast includes young Dickie Moore, Richard Bennett, Alexander Carr, Beryl Mercer and Alec Francis.
