Barn Dance Enjoyed

Saturday night was guest night for the Medford Movie club and the occasion for a special celebration in the form of a barn dance at the attractive and picturesque home of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Runyard on the north Pacific highway. Sixteen members of the club and 16 guests attended.

Dinner was spread under the beautiful trees on the lawn. Don Runyard, as master of ceremonies, called on O. A. (Zeke) Eden as president of the club, who responded with interesting and witty comment upon the activities of the club and its members, for the benefit of the guests present.

Huxley Kern, as director, reported on progress of "The Movie Club Murder." The recital of exceptional photography Bernard Roberts, as cameraman, had been able to secure. He promised a preview of the first reel as soon as the editing and titling could be completed.

Roberts expressed appreciation of the splendid co-operation given him by the members of the cast in his effort to secure the best possible photographic results.

Shortly after dark the party reassembled in the haymow of the big red barn and delight was voiced as they got their first view. Fir trees were everywhere, and ears of golden corn added color. A full moon behind the orchard shown down through the fir branches to give a soft, mellow light to the beautiful setting.

Dickey's orchestra furnished music and the cozy old haymow resounded to the strains of "Turkey in the Straw," and the thump of booted feet as the calico dresses and sunbonnets of the ladies, and the overalls, chin whiskers and goose greased boots of the men added color to the delightfully appropriate setting. A one o'clock supper in the old barn loft, eaten to the patter of the rain on the roof, was another pleasant surprise.

HOPKINS REVIEWS FAVORITE DANCE MUSIC IN RECITAL

A recital, crisp and refreshing as sunshine after rain in its unique form of presentation, held a Medford audience attentive to the very last chord of a Percy Grainger composition, third encore, when George Hopkins, piano virtuoso of the University of Oregon School of Music, played at the Baldwin Piano Shoppe recital hall here last evening.

It was a recital of dance music and each period of the dance was preceded by a short explanation in Mr. Hopkins' own language, made more vivid when his fingers were on the keys. The numbers were shortened by the verbal digressions and the recital closed with a relaxed audience still asking for more music. Mr. Hopkins responded with three encores.

His playing throughout the evening was characterized by a pronounced vigor and unlimited enthusiasm, which indicated that although he is already famed as a pianist and composer of wide reputation his musical career is only just begun.

He opened his program with a French suite by Bach, revealing the early development of rhythm, which, he explained, was once considered "very much of a sin."

Each number illustrated the dance of its day and was played with a clearness of technique and spirit, which made it easy for listeners to visualize an accompaniment of swaying bodies, dancing feet, or the dignified curtsy of the minuet.

Particularly interesting was Mr. Hopkins' own arrangement of Albeniz' Spanish tango and the artists' "Valse-Burlesque," which he played as an encore. Even the well known "Turkey in the Straw" took on new tonal qualities, unknown to many most familiar with its rhythm, when played by the Oregon artist.

"The Blue Danube Waltzes" of Strauss, always favorites when well played, were saved by Mr. Hopkins to the last and brought from the audience unlimited applause, the phrases seeming to positively roll from the piano under encouragement of his strong fingers. A little later came the bell-like tinkling of "The Music Box," an encore proving further the versatility of the artist.

Following the recital a small reception was held at the Baldwin recital hall and a number of people enjoyed meeting the artist and Mrs. Hopkins, who accompanied him to Medford.

The hall for last night's program was offered by Mrs. H. O. Furucker and the recital was played on the Baldwin concert grand. Mr. Hopkins also played a program yesterday afternoon at the high school, where a Baldwin grand was also available for his use.

Medford music lovers were today expressing their appreciation of the two programs to Miss Harriett Baldwin, supervisor of music in the local schools, who was instrumental in bringing Mr. Hopkins to Medford. While in the city Mr. and Mrs. Hopkins were house guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Gore.

BIG SENDOFF FOR 4-STAR GASOLINE

A striking illustration of the gulf which separates major sales campaigns of today from those of the early days of advertising, when a few small posters pasted on the roofs or walls of farmers' barns was considered "hot stuff," is given by M. D. Leh, Oregon division manager of General Petroleum Corporation, in connection with his company's introductory campaign on its new General Four-Star gasoline.

"In the early days of the oil industry, the main advertising reliance was placed upon posters," Leh said, "and in the earliest efforts, these were scattered widely over several eastern states. But all the posters used in an entire campaign at that time would not have been sufficient to supply one of our big cities today."

By way of contrast, General Petroleum Corporation's present campaign, introducing its new General Four-Star gasoline, calls for the use of over 25 tons of banners, streamers, wood or cardboard cutouts, metal signs, windshield stickers and novelties in the Oregon and Washington territory. All this, of course, is in addition to the purchase of big newspaper space, outdoor posters and radio time and talent. Talking about big advertising space, the banners and streamers in use, if placed end to end, would line both sides of a road for more than 30 miles.

Two of the largest trucks and trailers will be required to distribute the advertising material to the thousand General Petroleum dealers throughout the territory, the executive stated. They will have to transport 20,000 pounds of huge wooden signs—cutouts of Pegasus, the Flying Horse, symbol of the world-wide Socony Vacuum Corporation and of the General Petroleum Corporation; 6,000 pounds of novelty hats, 4,000 pounds of novelty boxes, 5,000 pounds of cardboard boxes, 8,000 pounds of metal shields, 6,000 pounds of pump globes and 5,000 pounds of pennants, or a total of 54,000 pounds of material.

CLERIC MARRIES CO-ED FOR WHOM HE LEFT FAMILY

RANDOLPH, Ia., May 24.—(UP)—The Rev. Sharon C. Inman, 35-year-old Presbyterian minister, arrived here today with the blonde co-ed for whom he deserted his family and congregation at Cave Springs, Mo.

The minister and the girl, formerly Miss Etta (Pat) Holdridge, said they were married at Sayre, Okla., last Thursday afternoon. "The Reverend Inman said he 'hitch-hiked' to Oklahoma from here to meet the girl, who came from Sanford, Tex., where she had been staying with an uncle. "We are very happy," said the minister. His 20-year-old bride smiled her agreement.

The couple traveled from Oklahoma to Sheldahl, Ia., where a brother of Inman met them and drove them here by automobile. They plan to remain at the home of Inman's father here until the minister obtains work. He plans to seek a job in Omaha, Neb., in a few days.

He will seek a position in a field other than the ministry. His resignation from the Ozark Presbyterian ended church charges of conduct unbecoming a minister, filed against him in connection with the triangle resulting from his affection for the pretty blonde. Mrs. Gladys Inman secured a divorce the same day.

The first Mrs. Inman and Miss Holdridge were students together at a teachers' college at Springfield, Mo., when Mrs. Inman, an attractive Auburn-haired mother of two children, discovered her husband's affections for her schoolmate, she took Miss Holdridge into the Inman home in an effort to hold his love of 13 years.
