LEGAL NOTICES

Notice of Sheriff's Sale. By virtue of an execution on foreclosure duly issued out of and under the seal of the Circuit Court of the State of Oregon, in and for the County of Jackson, to me directed and dated on the 24th day of May, 1933, and a certain action therein, wherein Mary W. Mathes, sometimes known as Mary Mathes, but being one and the same person, as plaintiff, recovered judgment against Media Fox and O. W. Fox, the defendants, for the sum of Two Thousand Six Hundred Ten and no/100 ($2610.00) Dollars, with interest at 5% per annum from December 24th, 1932, and the further sum of Three Hundred Thirty-six and 78/100 ($336.78) Dollars, amount paid by plaintiff for taxes, together with interest thereon at 8% per annum from May 3rd, 1932, with costs and disbursements taxed at Seventeen and 80/100 ($17.80) Dollars, and the further sum of Two Hundred Forty and no/100 ($240.00) Dollars, as attorney's fees, which judgment was enrolled and docketed in the Clerk's office of said Court on April, 1933.

Notice is hereby given that, pursuant to the terms of the said execution, I will on the 17th day of June, 1933, at 10:00 o'clock a. m., at the front door of the Courthouse in the City of Medford, in Jackson County, Oregon, offer for sale and will sell at public auction for cash, together with interest, the above described property, together with the costs of this sale, subject to redemption as provided by law, all of the right, title and interest in the said defendants, Media Fox and O. W. Fox, had on the 24th day of December, 1928, or now have in and to the following described property, situated in the County of Jackson, State of Oregon, to-wit:

Beginning at a point on the East line of C Street (now South Central Ave.) of the Town (now City) of Medford, according to the recorded plat thereof, 310 feet Southeastly from the intersection of said East line of C Street with the South line of East 9th Street; thence Southly along the East line of C Street 200 feet; thence Easterly on a line at right angles with said C Street 108 feet; thence Northward on a line parallel with said C Street 300 feet; thence Westerly 108 feet to the place of beginning. Saving and excepting from the foregoing that certain part of the South end thereof, conveyed to one G. Miller on April 11th, 1907, as described in Vol. 69, page 277, of the Deed Records of Jackson County, Oregon.

Also, beginning at a point on the West line of A Street (now Riverside Avenue) in the City of Medford, 140 feet South 27 deg. 33 min. East from the intersection of the South line of 9th Street and running thence South 54 deg. 30 min. West parallel with 9th Street 174 feet to the West line of the alley for connecting point and from said connecting point running thence South 54 deg. 30 min. East along West line of alley 75 feet to said connecting point at being in at the corner of Reserve in the City of Medford, Oregon.

Dated this 10th day of May, 1933.

WALTER J. OLMSCHIED, Sheriff of Jackson County, Oregon. BY OLGA E. ANDERSON, Deputy.

Jersey Ratifies Dry Law Repeal

TRENTON, N. J., June 2.—(AP)—Fifth among the states, New Jersey ratified formally today the proposed constitutional amendment to repeal prohibition, amendment to repeal prohibition. The vote was 202 to 2.

The only two dry delegates, Samuel Fredell of Bridgeton, and W. E. Thomas of Millford, shouted "no" loudly when their names were called. The other delegates laughed.

Farmers in Jugo-Slavia now feel that they are unimpaired, by law, from debt.

By the World FORGOT

A New Serial by Ruby M. Ayres

CHAPTER ONE "FINISHED"

ROM his room high up on the twenty-first floor of the great hotel, Nicholas Boyd could only see the sky.

It was a hot, stifling night, and though the windows were open to their fullest extent there seemed hardly a breath of air.

It was two o'clock in the morning, but far down in the street below, the hum of ceaseless traffic and the sharp hoot-hoot of motor horns filled the night.

Nicholas lay on his back, his hands folded beneath his head, his eyes fixed unseeingly on the patch of sky which was all that was visible through the open window—sky like the black alky velvet of a woman's gown, hung with sparkling diamonds.

"Finished!"

That one word had been hammering against his brain with maddening monotony since the moment—more than five hours ago now, when he had shaken hands with the a wonderful find, a new star, and an Englishman at that.

The doctors had done their best, but all the skill in America had not been enough to cover up that twisted face, to disguise that limp.

NICHOLAS closed his eyes, and peered into the future.

He wouldn't be penniless of course; thank God he had had sense enough to save something.

He could go back home, and live quietly somewhere in the country or by the sea.

But Bernie would hate that. She liked London well enough for a week or two in the height of the season, but to retire into nothingness would be an entirely different matter.

She was so young, and so fond of gaiety; she blossomed like a flower in the artificial light of admiration and what she called "life" . . . he could not see her in a little house in some obscure country village, which was all he would be able to afford to give her. Yes, Bernie would be the greatest problem he knew—the last hurdle at which perhaps he would finally crash.

They had only been married six months, Boyd's scarred face twisted ironically as he recalled that wedding.

The crowds, the publicity, the

"That I'd played the hero once too often."

"Beast!"

Boyd said nothing; he was sitting on the side of the bed now, staring down at the floor.

Bernie came a step nearer, slowly, as if she was almost afraid of him.

"WHAT else did he say?" she asked again.

"He said what I expected he would say—my contract is cancelled. I'm no more good to him."

"Nick!"

He laughed at the dismay in her voice, but now he did not look at her. He was wondering if she would come to him and put her arms round his neck and tell him that it made no difference, that she still loved him, finished as he was. He longed so desperately for comfort.

But Bernie only stood there, the white wrap falling back from her bare shoulders, her lips parted.

"What does it mean?" she asked at length.

"It means that I must, I suppose, go back home."

She caught her breath on a sharp sound.

"To England?"

"It's my home."

"And—me?" she asked.

Nicholas was staring at the floor again.

great producer who had made him—the great producer who, with real regret, had firmly relegated him to the scrap-heap.

"You must see my dear fellow . . . no fault of yours . . . Real bad luck. If there is anything I can do . . ."

The usual empty platitudes, tattered with the full knowledge that there was nothing anybody could do.

A shooting star shot suddenly across the blackness of the sky and fell.

"As I have fallen," Nicholas told himself grimly.

His career had been as brilliant, as rapid and as short as that of the blazing thing that had just passed beyond his vision—to fall—where? God alone knew, just as God alone knew what was to become of him. Finished! Useless, unseeing, unwanted . . . with a kind of grim satisfaction Nicholas Boyd heaped the words one on the other and still it seemed impossible that it was to himself that he applied them.

Jaffer had been decent in his own way.

"Sorry old son—you've played the hero once too often."

Yes, that was true enough, but it was hard luck that the only time he had played it seriously, his whole career should be wrecked.

The girl had been nothing to him, and even he could not say what crazy impulse it was that had sent him dashing to her rescue.

It hadn't been at all picturesque either, and if she had kept her head she would have been quite safe.

But as it was . . . well, he would not soon forget the crash of that iron hoof in his face and on his body.

Finished!

A short life and a gay one! Not a year yet since he had first flashed across the changing face of the screen, and had been acclaimed as packed street outside the church, the army of photographers and reporters.

Boyd moved suddenly and switched on the light beside his bed.

Twenty past two! Bernie ought to be in. He had not liked to refuse to let her go to Roy Killick's party, perhaps he had even been glad to let her go—to postpone the moment for as long as possible, when he would have to tell her that he was on the scrap-heap.

He had not undressed—what was the use when one could not sleep? New York lay like a flashy jewel far below him; a dizzy drop down to the street where the cars and taxicabs stood along like gleaming spiders. It would be certain death if a fellow stood out on the ledge and let go, and he wouldn't be the first who had found it impossible to find sufficient courage to walk calmly away from the glare of a great position into nothingness.

There had been a girl in Hollywood, a poor little devil who had once played opposite him. He had liked her in a way, she had no real vice, but she had been weak, and success had gone to her head like wine. A dose of poison had finished her.

There was a slight movement in the room behind him, and he turned sharply to see his wife standing in the open door that divided their apartments.

She was a little flushed, and her eyes were bright. She took a step forward and asked, "What are you doing, Nick?"

"Nothing—looking at the stars."

He moved towards her, limping painfully, and he was quick to see the little shadow of distaste that crossed her charming face.

"Well!" she said. "Did Jaffer come?"

"Yes."

"What—what did he say?"

"What do you want to do?" he asked.

It seemed a long time before she spoke.

"I can't live in England; it would kill me. Besides, we haven't any money."

"I've saved a bit."

"A bit!" she laughed. "How much? Not a year's salary, I suppose?"

Boyd said nothing; he felt as if he were talking to a stranger. And yet such a short time ago she had been so much in love with him. Once or twice the king's horses and all the king's men can never mend Humpty Dumpty again!" he added cynically.

For a moment their eyes met and another—hers making no effort to disguise their dismay—horror!—no, he tried to believe it was not that, his—hard, in steady defiance.

She said again almost whimpering.

"I can't live in England—it isn't fair to ask me. I would never have married you if I'd thought you would ever expect it."
