CODLING MOTH SPRAY FOR PEAR AND APPLE TREES ADVISED SOON

The second cover spray for the control of codling moth worms on pears and apples should be completed by June 17, according to the advice of L. P. Wilcox, county agent and L. G. Gentner of the Southern Oregon Experiment Station.

The recommended spray for apples at this time is as follows: One gallon light type summer oil emulsion, plus one half pound spreader, plus two pounds powdered arsenate of lead to the hundred gallons of water.

On pears use powdered arsenate of lead only, three pounds to the hundred gallons of water. If rust mites are present and control is desired, use one and one quarter gallons medium type summer oil emulsion, plus one-half pound spreader plus two pounds arsenate of lead to the hundred gallons of water.

Heavy flights of moths have taken place during the past few evenings and probably will continue for the rest of the week, therefore, this application as called for is of extreme importance and should be applied with complete thoroughness.

CHILD EDUCATION NEEDS REPORTED BY MRS. DUNBAR

Voicing a sincere plea for education of Oregon's children to prepare them to stand firm under the pressure of life, and reporting an alarming campaign to undermine education in this country, Mrs. Sadie Orr Dunbar, executive secretary of the Oregon Tuberculosis society, addressed the Medford Kiwanis club and guests yesterday at luncheon at the Hotel Medford.

There is throughout the state and nation today, Mrs. Dunbar declared, a definite willingness on the part of taxpayers, boards of education and the public in general to let things happen to education as a result of the depression.

Dangers to society and the American form of government to result from a lapse in educational progress were cited by Mrs. Dunbar as reasons for maintaining educational facilities in preference to other services and improvements.

Education, she pointed out, should not have to pay for relief work. The construction of bridges to supply employment to the unemployed while schools are being closed because of lack of funds to carry on Mrs. Dunbar described as false economy and a situation which can only bring alarm to the country if carried on.

A move to decrease state education to the old time eight grades standard, was reported by Mrs. Dunbar, who asked, "Can the American form of government withstand this decline in education?"

"When it comes to budget making time," she urged her audience to "consider the child, the citizen of tomorrow, who must be prepared mentally, physically and morally to stand up to life's test."

The country has already mortgaged the youth of tomorrow, she explained, through passage of unlimited improvements, which he must pay for when his time comes. Because of this he must be prepared to meet the test. He cannot live his life twice.

Education, she added, must make some changes, but it must not be discarded in the name of economy. The closing of schools throughout the nation because of lack of funds, she condemned as dangerous to the very government of the country.

"Sinister forces," she declared, "are at work today to undermine education in America. They have their reasons. What will happen to our country tomorrow if the voters are people of eighth grade educational? It behooves everyone of us to study the drift and determination what must be done to counteract it."

An appeal to the American Legion to check this tendency to undermine American education, was also made by Mrs. Dunbar in her address.

The history of the three White House conferences, which have been held to better the outlook for American children was told by Mrs. Dunbar, who stated that surprising and alarming figures grew out of the research work, which preceded the last conference. It considered particularly the handicapped child. There are 45,000,000 children in the United States the investigation revealed. Of this number but 10,000,000 are well equipped to meet life. The other 35,000,000 are confronted with various handicaps, some physical, some mental, some moral. The aid of the Kiwanis club was asked by Mrs. Dunbar in closing, to curb the dangerous mental attitude, which has resulted from the depression.

Many guests attended the luncheon to hear Mrs. Dunbar's talk. Among them were Miss Mildred Carlton, president of the Jackson County Public Health association; Mrs. J. C. S. Wells, Mrs. Alex Sparrow, Mrs. R. E. Green, Mrs. Frank Dillard, Mrs. Max Pierce, Mrs. Everett Faber and Mrs. Trowbridge.

Mrs. Dunbar was introduced by Everett Faber, program chairman for the day.
