INSULATORS ARE BROKEN BY BOYS

Small boys who shoot insulators with rifles are becoming a serious menace in this county according to a report from The California Oregon Power Company, and immediate steps are to be taken to curb this dangerous practice. The local Copco crew changed a total of 15 high tension insulators yesterday in the rural district north of Medford and many other changes have been made in the past few weeks.

Shooting down insulators or high tension wires endangers lives and property, as well as interrupting service. Moreover, an insulator broken by rifle shots or stones is often the cause of radio-interference, a subject in which the general public, as well as the power company, is deeply interested. The cost of changing high tension insulators is no small item in the operating expenses of a public utility according to J. C. Thompson, division manager of The California Oregon Power company, in an interview today.

"Yesterday's changes involved an expense of $7 each for the 15 insulators, as well as the labor involved, which often costs more than the insulators," said Mr. Thompson.

Breaking insulators either with rifles or stones comes under the head of wanton destruction of personal property and is subject to arrest and conviction according to the sheriff's office, where an investigation is now being made to bring offenders to justice.

standing at a window and he overheard the conversation.

Conners repeated his charge that his two signed statements were not true, and that "the officers were trying to get him to say a lot of bologna." He claimed his second statement was not voluntary.

Under cross examination, Conners was able to point out but one portion he considered untrue, and claimed he had been forced to make the statement.

"You entered the vault voluntarily. No officer forced you to help steal the ballots," asked Attorney Moody. The witness answered in the affirmative.

Conners reiterated his testimony of the LaDieu trial, that he helped steal the ballots, because he did not agree with the court's decision, ordering a recount, and the court "did not understand things as well as some of us did."

The court asked: "You did not know you were in contempt of court then?" Conners replied: "No, your honor, I did not."

Evade at Times Under cross-examination Conners did not remember time or faces, and was an evasive witness at times.

Conners maintained he did not "throw the ballot pouches out," but "put them on the window-sill. He did not see or know who took them away."

Sheriff H. E. Hess of Coos county, was called as a witness to attack the veracity of the Sexton brothers, and was subjected to a grilling by Attorney Moody.

"I didn't have to inquire about the Sextons. I had them in jail once to know that," was Sheriff Hess' reply to one query.

"When did Tom Enright tell you to say that, if you got a chance?" asked Attorney Moody. The sheriff denied the charge.

Sheriff Hess denied that he had "spent an evening with Enright," but admitted he had received a letter from suspended Sheriff Schermerhorn.

born inquiring about the Sexton brothers.

Hits Sexton Repute Sheriff Hess testified that the reputation of the Sexton brothers for truth and veracity was "bad" in Coos county.

The state indicated in its questioning that it would impeach Conners' testimony, and he was asked: "Will you deny that you saw a woman at the southwest corner of the court house, just after you had left the vault, and had removed the six ballot pouches that LaDieu hauled away?"

Conners thought it "possible," but "I don't remember."

The final state witness on direct examination was Frank McKittrick, brother of Wesley, and around the rear of the courthouse on the night of the stealing of votes.

McKittrick testified that he saw Jones and Fehi together on the south side of the courthouse; that he had seen Jones and the two Sextons talking at the southwest corner, and that he had seen Jones inside the auditorium.

Burley Sexton was recalled for questioning by the defense relative to time, but the witness said, "I would not attempt to fix the time, definitely."

Philip B. Lowd, deputy sheriff, testified at the Monday afternoon session of the Jones trial that two of three days after the vote stealing he saw Jones, Glenn and suspended Sheriff Gordon L. Schermerhorn, in the sheriff's office, and "a son-in-law of Jones, whose name I do not know," and the son-in-law of the defendant told him:

"I saw your car in Rogue River early Tuesday morning," and that Arthur La Dieu (convicted of vote stealing last week) was driving, and "Wes McKittrick and another man were in the car."

Lowd further testified that he repeated the conversation in Jones presence, and he admitted it, and then Lowd said to Schermerhorn, Glenn and Jones:

Feared Implication. "I don't know what you fellows know about this ballot stealing, if you know anything, but I serve notice that I don't want to be implicated in any way."

State witnesses have testified that LaDieu and McKittrick borrowed Lowd's sedan on the night of the robbery, drove to Jones' home in Rogue River, with stolen ballots, and McKittrick and Hugg, son-in-law of Jones, cut some pith to make "the ballots burn better."

Lowd was subjected to a short cross-examination, the defense stressing the fact that Lowd had not reported his testimony to Schermerhorn, then sheriff.

Twenty-seven witnesses went to the stand yesterday, and at 3:30 the court recessed until this morning at 9:00 o'clock.

John Brock, a taxi driver, testified that he attended the "Congress," and

Barthelmess Coming In Craterian Drama

Heralded as the "Dawn Patrol" of 1933, Richard Barthelmess' newest picture "Central Airport," comes to the Craterian theater Wednesday for a limited engagement. The super air-thriller glorifies the flying heroes of peace... not war... and is said to exceed anything that the talented star has ever done.

Richard Barthelmess plays the part of a returned war hero who pilots trans-continental passenger planes. He crashes his ship, with a heavy toll of lives, and is "grounded." Discredited in the game he loves and the only one he knows, he goes barnstorming with a traveling air-circus, and falls in love with Sally Eilers, a parachute jumper.

Their glamorous love affair and the many thrilling plane crashes build "Central Airport" into a mighty drama.

Schermerhorn Also Trowled. Hall testified he saw suspended Sheriff Schermerhorn coming around the southwest corner of the building from the rear, and that Schermerhorn talked to Oliver Martin, a defendant, for a considerable length of time.

Under cross-examination by the defense, Hall admitted he was indicted for criminal libel upon L. A. Banks, and denied the claim of Attorney Enright that he heard Mrs. Martin, chairman of the meeting, tell Jones to go guard duty, because of boisterous conduct outside.

"Most of the boisterous conduct was inside," Hall answered.

Mrs. Geraldine Kring testified that she saw Banks, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Brown and Mrs. Henrietta B. Martin and Mrs. Lindsay in the auditorium about 11 o'clock that night by the court to repeat Mrs. Martin's declaration as to why they were remaining so long when the defense objected.

Elsie Olsen Brown, a clerk in the county clerk's office testified to Jones being present at a meeting in the county judge's quarters, when bonds were purportedly arranged for L. A. Banks on a criminal libel charge.

Jones Wore Cigar. Mark Whipple, a farmer of the Rogue River district, testified on the afternoon before the ballot thefts he talked with Jones, after the recount had been ordered, and bet Jones a cigar that "Schermerhorn will be counted out."

Jones replied: "No they won't count Schermerhorn out."

Whipple said the next morning when he learned the ballots
