

TRIAL OF JONES IN BALLOT THEFT TO JURY'S HANDS

Cites Greatest Conspiracy The defense claims that the evidence given against Jones, by his fellow conspirators does not coincide. The testimony in the greatest conspiracy that ever existed does not conform. There was a conspiracy to crucify our Christ. The record of the four apostles—Mark, Matthew, Luke, and John—are all different, but the conspiracy was completed. Does any sane person doubt, for one moment that a conspiracy did not exist to destroy the ballots, and prevent the recount?

This was not a spontaneous crime. The boys—the Sextons and Connors did not do it of their own volition. Older men put them up to it. Men who would profit thereby, men who did not want the ballots counted in the sheriff's contest, and who did not want them counted for another office. They wanted to be able to continue their practices.

At another point Moody said: "I'll tell you why the defense did not call La Dieu. He could testify. His case has been disposed of. He has been seated in the courtroom all the time advising the defense. I presume they did not call La Dieu because La Dieu did not want to add perjury to his crimes, and he is to be complimented for it."

County Fools Bill "Attorney Enright got up here and tells you that the state is paying for witnesses. The state is also paying for defense witnesses. The defense brought two from Coos county. All the witnesses get the same pay. Jackson county fools the bill."

Referring to Enright's castigation of state witnesses, Attorney Moody said: "The state has to take the associate of the defendant in the crime, as its witnesses. The state did not ask them to commit burglary not in a dwelling, and thus thwart an order of this court."

The defense deals in half-truths, to blind you to the guilt of Jones. They should point to the whole truth or nothing."

Attorney Enright characterized Moody's first speech, as "a patriotic address of government, and says the nation will not survive unless Walter Jones, a good taxpayer is not convicted."

Says State Witnesses All Liars

"Walter Jones—and you will remember I asked him specifically, declared on the witness stand, that all the state witnesses, who connected him with the ballot theft were untruthful," declared Assistant Attorney General Ralph E. Moody in his closing address to the jury Wednesday afternoon.

"The state needs no witnesses to impeach Walter Jones. He impeached himself. I could ask for no better impeaching witness."

According to his testimony, no state witness told the truth. It looks like at least one of them, might have approached it, when Mr. Jones was concerned. Are you going to believe Jones the only witness, who is not a liar."

Jones and Glenn and the rest of the co-conspirators were too cowardly to do the job themselves. They wanted the fruits of the crime, but would not take the risks," declared the state prosecutor. "The size of Jones could not crawl thru the vault window, as the jury can see for themselves. So they went and induced these kids to do it. They didn't want to do it, but they looked at the size of Jones and Martin and others, and thought it best."

Went To Sextons

"The Sexton boys were not the best boys in the world. They had been buffeted around a bit. Glenn and Fehl gave them a place to sleep, and something for their stomachs. So when the ballot theft conspirators, went looking for aides in their crime, did they seek boys from the Sunday schools, and the well-regulated homes. They wouldn't do it, and they knew it. So they went to the Sextons, who had not been blessed with the divine environments, such as you have in your own homes. The Sextons were not as fortunately circumstanced as most youths. They were obligated to Jones, and Fehl.

"The ballots meant nothing to the Sexton boys. They couldn't eat them. They couldn't spend them. The Sextons didn't care who was sheriff. It made no difference to them, who was county judge. But it did make a difference to Glenn, who held a job under Sehermerhorn. It did make a difference to Jones, a Fehl appointee to a county job."

"You have got to believe the Sextons, for they told you they broke the vault window, and with Jean Connors, another boy, they stole the ballots."

Fehl Interested

"Fehl was mighty interested in the ballots. They did not want the ballots counted, for sheriff, or any other office. They were afraid the sheriff's recount would reveal other things, they did not want the people to know," declared Attorney Moody at another point.

Jones denies that La Dieu, McKibrick, and Edington came to his house at Rogue River with stolen ballots. Jones wife denies it. His daughter denies it. His son-in-law denies it. Why didn't the defense call Arthur La Dieu. He has been in the courtroom all the time. He was there. He knows. They didn't call La Dieu because he would have knocked the story of Jones and his kin into a cocked hat," Attorney Moody asserted. "Jones defense has been an alibi, and a poor one," Moody said in closing.

"You as citizens have got to do your duty, and put a stop to things like ballot stealing. It strikes at the very foundation of our government—the rule the people. It is hard to imagine the malignancy of this crime—its audacity."

Attorney Moody also said: "No defendant, in any court, in any jurisdiction, ever received a fairer trial, than Walter Jones."
