

EXTENSION GROUP PLANS OUTING AT JOHN WHITE HOME

The Jackson County Extension committee is planning a two day retreat at the summer home of Mrs. John White on Wagner Creek. The party will leave Medford at 10:30 Sunday morning and return Monday evening. Out of town guests for the trip will be Miss Claribel Nye, state leader of home economics extension, Corvallis; Mrs. Sara H. Case, home demonstration agent, Columbia county; Miss Frances Clinton, home demonstration agent Multnomah county; Miss Thea Gaylor, home demonstration agent, Clackamas; Miss Gertrude Skow, home demonstration agent, Lane county.

The program will feature the three "R's"—Rest, Recreation and Rejuvenation. The regular monthly committee meeting will be held on Monday afternoon. Some time will be devoted to making attractive and inexpensive portfolios or book covers for bulletins and mimeographed material. These books will be exhibited in September at the officers and leaders conference.

Committee members who will be included in the party are: Miss Alice Hanley, Medford; Mrs. Etta Birdseye, Rogue River; Mrs. W. H. Young, Eagle Point; Mrs. Bertha Glasgow, Valleyview; Mrs. J. R. McCracken, Valleyview; Mrs. Lee Port, Applegate; Mrs. Mabel C. Mack, home demonstration agent; Miss Claire Hanley, guest.

FORMER JAILER JOHN GLENN IS NEXT ON TRIAL

Jurors if they were members of the self-styled "Good Government Congress"; if they had attended any of its meetings; if they believed in the doctrine advocated by L. A. Banks, former local agitator and convicted slayer, and their views on "corroboration" of evidence.

Good progress was made this morning in the selection of a jury and it is expected to be completed by noon tomorrow at the latest.

Glenn is the third of the ballot theft defendants to go on trial—the others being J. Arthur LaDieu, former business side of Banks, and Walter J. Jones of Rogue River, both convicted.

In the LaDieu and Jones cases the testimony revealed a portion of what the state contends was Glenn's role in the crime.

The Sexton brothers, who pleaded guilty to the charge, testified that on the evening of the crime Glenn, then county jailer, had propositioned them on the basement floor of the court house about committing the theft, but they demurred on the ground "there is too much law around"; that Glenn later induced them to go to his office in the jail, and there he promised them $10 apiece and good jobs; that when they told him they had burned the contents of 18 ballot pouches in the court house furnace and hidden the tops, Glenn replied: "Leave them stay there; they can't count them," and that he praised them for the thoroughness of their destroying.

The state contends that Glenn was one of the leaders of the plot.

Glenn has been a resident of Ashland for four or five years. He was named county jailer last January by Suspended Sheriff Gordon L. Schermhorn at the reported instigation of County Judge Earl Fehl.

BIBLE CONFERENCE AT CENTRAL POINT DRAWS CAPACITY ATTENDANCE

Thursday was the first day of the Y. P. B. C. being held at the Federated church at Central Point. Registrations reached 76, and there are more coming today. Capacity of the dining room was taxed to the utmost when 115 (nearly all of them young people) were fed at noon. Nearly 90 answered the roll call in the afternoon session and 102 young people answered roll call this morning.

Presentation of Bible truth has been clear and to the point. Various phases of vital truth is being taught; and the interest is far above expectation. Every committee has been busy and can scarcely keep up with its work. For the afternoon recreations the conference will go out to the Rogue river where games will be played and a wicker roast enjoyed. Tomorrow afternoon the conference will go for a swim.

The church was well filled last night for the evening evangelistic message. The tide of interest is rising, and all are in anticipation of the good things coming. Sixteen outside communities are represented.

Kay Kastle Girls Added Attraction Craterian Tonight

As an added attraction to the epic air-thriller, "Central Airport," which shows at the Craterian theater until tomorrow night, the Kay Kastle Dance revue will be presented on the stage of the nine o'clock show tonight only. There will be 35 talented youngsters offering a diversified program of songs and dances—tap routines, soft shoe, toe, and novelty numbers. Katherine Slang, who conducts the dance school, will also offer a solo number, the only adult who will appear on the entire program.

"Central Airport," with Richard Barthelmess in the leading role and Sally Eilers and Tom Brown in featured supporting parts, is the dramatic story, replete with thrills of the commercial flyers of today. It has some of the most "impossible" shots ever photographed in a motion picture.

"The White Sister," a picture that has been greatly anticipated by southern Oregon theater-goers, comes to the Craterian's screen Sunday.

STATE-WIDE BANK CHAIN IS PLANNED BY TRANSAMERICA

SAN FRANCISCO, June 23.—(AP)—Trans-America corporation revealed plans today to build a state-wide branch banking system throughout Oregon.

The disclosure came from John M. Grant, president of Trans-America, in the course of comment on the acquisition of the American National bank of Portland. Grant virtually admitted negotiations have been well advanced for acquisition of other institutions in various Oregon cities. After explaining the main points in the American National acquisition by the First National bank of Portland, a Trans-America unit, Grant forecast continued expansion when he said:

"Since the passage of the Oregon bank legislation last April, the First National bank of Portland has extended its branch banking activities to include the full territory of the city of Portland.

"Now that the Glass-Steagall bill has been passed the way is clear to establish through First National bank of Portland a state-wide branch banking system for Oregon similar to the service extended throughout California by the Bank of America. "The initial moves in the inauguration of this program are under way at the present time and further acquisitions of independent units outside the metropolitan area of Portland are now under consideration."

Grant's comparison of the First National and the Bank of America indicates well-developed plans for an extended Oregon system. The Bank of America has more than 400 branches scattered through California. This bank's service in linking a large number of relatively minor financial institutions into a powerful chain was credited throughout the era of banking stress with saving California from a multitude of bank failures.

In order to stimulate travel by train, 3,500 employees of a New England railroad system have been selling railroad tickets to consumers in their homes.

ALIBI CLAIM OF MAYOR FAILS TO CONVINCE JURORS

assisted in the loading of the ballot pouches on auto, and that he warned Henrietta B. Martin, L. A. Banks, C. H. Brown and wife, and L. O. Van Wagon, who remained in the auditorium, not to come out until the rear of the court house had been cleared of stolen pouches. The state contended that County Judge Fehl and the "congress" leaders knew of the ballot theft.

Jones introduced witness purporting to show that at the time the state held he was in the court house, about 7:30 p. m., discussing the theft with Fehl, Brecheen, Glenn and the Sexton brothers, he was at the home of Fehl eating supper, and that he did not arrive at the court house until 8 o'clock.

A son-in-law, daughter and Jones' wife testified that LaDieu, McKittick and Edington did not come to his house at Rogue River with Phil Lowry's auto loaded with ballots, as had been testified.

Jones, a man of 62 years, is mayor of Rogue River, and last January was named road supervisor by County Judge Fehl. He took part in the January-February turmoil at the court house at the Bursell-Lamkin trial farce, dramatically presenting a petition calling upon Commissioner Nealon to resign.
