Entire Jury in John Glenn Ballot Theft Trial Dismissed by Court

Comment on the Day's News

By FRANK JENKINS. HERE is an interesting note from the market page: "A near famine exists in the potato market. Holdings of potatoes in Oregon, Washington and Idaho are unusually limited, with a call for supplies perhaps on the latest date ever known in this territory for the crop."

PLEASE note that INFLATION has nothing to do with this condition that has arisen in the potato market. It is a straight case of supply and demand. Supply appears to be down, and if supply is down we may expect that there will be more buyers than sellers in the market.

NOTE particularly these instances where reduced supply, and not inflation, are pushing prices upward. They are significant. Stimulation of price by inflation is ARTIFICIAL. Price increases that result from reduced supply are natural.

THE ups and downs in the stock market are different. They appear to be influenced chiefly by inflation prospects. On the days when the dollar sells down, the stock market goes up. On the days when the dollar sells up, indicating decreased inflation, the stock market goes down.

LONDON, June 25.—(AP)—World-wide action to reduce the burden of debts upon individuals, raise prices and increase the demand for raw materials was urged today by Senator James Couzens of Michigan, American delegate, in a vigorous address before the world economic conference.

Senator Couzens' address stirred the economic conference. He emphasized the necessity of organizing creditors throughout the world and of establishing some form of permanent body to act in an advisory capacity between organized creditors and organized debtors.

At the same time, he asserted, the purchasing power must be increased by such measures as public works and that the burden of debt "must be lightened." He cited measures already taken by the United States in these directions.
