Hayes and Gable Delight Audience in Craterian Hit

Those who attended yesterday's showing of "The White Sister," starring Helen Hayes and Clark Gable at the Craterian theater, were undoubtedly greatly surprised to hear an even greater improvement in the sound system that was recently installed. The reason for this improvement was the installation Saturday night of two new speakers on the stage. These speakers are of twice the dimensions of the former horns and the very latest development in reproduction systems. The low notes of the organ music were brought out especially clear in the concert scenes of the picture.

"The White Sister" is the much discussed talking picture version of the P. Marlon Crawford romance of the same name. The combination of Helen Hayes and Clark Gable is a particularly strong one and they do a beautiful job of bringing to the screen one of the most stirring love stories in literary history. In its poignant, touching narrative, its beautiful direction and in the brilliant performances of its two well known stars and its exceptional supporting cast, "The White Sister" stands out forcibly as one of the best love stories ever screened.

Violent fluctuations took some deliveries of wheat to within nearly immediate reach of $1.00 a bushel, a figure that seemed impossible of realization a few months ago when wheat was worth less than half that price.

In the last minute of trading, May wheat touched 99 1/2 cents a bushel and closed at that figure.

Widepread conditions approaching crop failure seldom equaled in the United States were reported as a result of three weeks of abnormal heat and drought. Approximately 150,000-200 bushels of all grains changed hands here today as prices shot skyward.

Technicolor Film On Rialto Program

"King of Jazz," made by Universal Pictures three years ago at an expenditure of almost two million dollars, is bringing packed houses to the Rialto theater where it will show until tomorrow night.

In its 1933 revival showing, the picture seems to have an even greater beauty of color and the music is brought out more forcibly through the new sound system. Its many song hits and its beautiful scenes all done in Technicolor make this picture still one of the greatest bits of entertainment ever shown. With the coming-back of musicals, it will do producer a great deal of good to look carefully at "King of Jazz," because here is a picture that combines all the elements of superior production with "class" entertainment that appeal to everyone.
