He was a devout lifetime member of the Episcopal church.

SPELL OF BANKS BLAMED IN THEFT BALLOT POUCHES

Schermerhorn Visitor. Wesley McKittrick, "captain of the guards," numbering a dozen men, testified that Schermerhorn was a "frequent visitor at the News," conferred with La Dieu, and that McKittrick and the other guards lived in a house at 323 Laurel street, furnished by the Pehl Realty Co. The witness said he paid no rent, "but I painted the inside of the house."
Edington testified that Schermerhorn called every evening at the News and McKittrick "on the average of every other evening."
The defense objected to this line of questioning, but the court ruled it was competent as "showing the associations of the conspirators."
In an impeaching question to McKittrick, Attorney Newman for the defense asked, "do you recall a conversation with Harley Hall of Jacksonville, a juror in the Jones case, on or about February 10 or 11, last, in, and in front of the News office, in which Hall said to you, in effect: "There is going to be a recount of the ballots," and you replied: "There will be no recount, for we are going to steal the ballots?" "Hall then said for that: "Will Schermerhorn stand for that?" and you replied "He won't know anything about it."
McKittrick did not recall any such conversation.
Told to Get Ready. McKittrick testified that with La Dieu and Edington he went to the courthouse, while the recount hearing was in progress on February 20 and was told by Brecheen "to go to the basement and get ready to steal the ballots, when they come down."
McKittrick repeated his testimony given in previous trials, depicting how under the direction of La Dieu, they had made a midnight trip to the home of Mayor Jones in Rogue River with six ballot pouches, La Dieu had procured at the courthouse, and later destroyed the ballots in the home of McKittrick's parents at Jones' suggestion, and dumped the pouches into Rogue River at Galls creek.
The defense questioned McKittrick and Edington relative to money they had received from the county. Edington said he had received $30 or $40 for services and "felt I should do all I could to help get all the information I could, to help clear things up."
Family Aided. McKittrick testified that when he was first arrested Deputy District Attorney Neilson "had stood good for some groceries at Alexander's" for his wife and baby, and had paid for it with a personal check.
McKittrick said the county had paid him recently for "going to a mine claim and telling three state witnesses they were wanted, but carried no papers to serve." The claim is located in an isolated area, and difficult to locate.
Mrs. Nora B. McKittrick, her daughter-in-law, Elsie McKittrick, 18, E. A. Fleming, Earl Bryant, and James D. Gaddy of Jacksonville were scheduled to be among the state witnesses called this afternoon.

TRIAL WILL START SOON AS PRESENT CASE COMPLETED

office, and there was no difficulty in securing his jury. The court is not warranted in giving a change of venue if a fair and impartial jury can be secured in Jackson County, and with the large population in this county, I have no doubt but what a fair jury can be selected.
The court will do all in its power to see that a fair and impartial jury is selected. The panel is exhausted, but the court is willing to co-operate with counsel on both sides in the selection of a jury. Neither side has any right to an advantage over the other. I think the court and counsel can select a jury so that the ends of justice will be met. And the court will certainly see to it, as far as is within my power, that a fair and impartial jury is selected to try the defendant. He is entitled to a fair trial, and I want him to have a fair trial, and so far as in me lies, he will have one, but in the circumstances, I do not think this court is warranted in granting the motion for a change of venue, and the motion will be overruled.
Von Schmalz. We desire an exception.
The Court: It is not necessary for the record to show it, but you may have your exception.
(At this time the jury is recalled.)
The Court: This case is set for trial right after this case as I understand?
Mr. Moody: Yes, your honor.
The Court: Counsel will be ready to try after this case? If there is any way to select that jury in open court in the presence of the judge I am perfectly willing.
Enright: I will put some time in looking that up, your honor, we would like to have it if possible.
The Court: I think the court has jurisdiction to see that a fair jury is selected, and I will certainly exercise that power.

own business." That Tingleaf raised his arm to strike and that he then jumped from the car and knocked Tingleaf down.
Other statements filed set forth that Tingleaf had gone to the car to bring "Irene" into the hall, upon request of her aunt, Mrs. Bots. The latter had returned from the car, where earlier in the evening she had been sitting with Pettigrew, Tingleaf and Irene, when Hanscom approached and ordered the two men to get out. They did so and returned to the dance hall, Mrs. Bots coming out later with Tingleaf to get "Irene."
Hanscom said he had returned to the dance hall and was dancing, when tagged by a man, who insisted upon talking to him. He refused to go and was later approached by Constable Holford, who arrested him after he finished the dance.
When other dancers learned of the assault, it was stated yesterday by Eagle Point residents, they attempted to mob Hanscom and were beaten back by the officer.
A number of Eagle Point people came to Medford at an early hour yesterday and remained at the hospital to learn of Tingleaf's condition.
An autopsy was held late yesterday afternoon by Coroner Frank Pehl with Dr. A. F. W. Kresse, the attending physician, and County Physician C. I. Drummond in attendance. Investigation of the case was being continued today by Constable Holford, the state police and district attorney's office.
Leaves Family. Mr. Tingleaf, a farmer of the Eagle Point section, leaves a wife and two children.
Hanscom, the son of Charley Hanscom of Eagle Point, has been a well known character in the valley for several years, appearing in the courts on charges filed by his wife, who accused him of non-support and of beating their child.
