

MISERLY WOMAN DIES BY EATING SUICIDE'S CRUST

Worth $45,000, She Grabs 'Doped' Bread Left in Restaurant by Man Intent On Ending Own Life

By H. Allen Smith
United Press Staff Correspondent.
NEW YORK, July 28.—(UP)—A New York woman, who, with $45,000 in the bank, spent her days in sorry poverty rather than touch her savings, was dead today because she unwittingly snatched up a crust of bread which already had served a dependent man as a means to end his life.

There are many women in New York like Lillian Rosenfield. Women who inhabit dirty cellar rooms, miserably and mysteriously in their every movement, venturing forth at night to beg pennies on the street, some of them even rifling garbage cans while their fat bank books are hidden somewhere in their lodgings. Most of them are older than Lillian Rosenfield. She was only 43. But this story properly begins with Henry Jellinek.

Poisons Bread
Jellinek was 50, an automobile mechanic in business for himself. Of late business had been at a standstill with him, and his health was poor. It was yesterday morning that he decided to kill himself.

He went to an automat restaurant on upper Broadway—a place where patrons serve themselves by inserting nickels into slots for the items of food they desire.

Jellinek carried a violent poison with him. He obtained bread and went to a balcony in the restaurant, where the bustle is not so great. Pouring the poison on the bread, he ate part of it, then walked stoically from the table to a washroom, knowing that he would be dead in a few minutes.

Snatches Leavings
Lillian Rosenfield, ill-dressed and haggard, was hovering nearby waiting for some customer to leave his table without consuming all his food. She spied the remainder of the bread, sat down at the table and wolfed it. As she rose to go, her morning's success, the agony struck her. She whimpered, fell to the floor and died an hour later in Knickerbocker hospital. Jellinek already was dead in the washroom.

Police and the medical examiner were deeply puzzled at first. They found the same poison in each of the stomachs. On learning that the eccentric woman held all men in contempt, they reached the conclusion today that her death had been accidental, while Jellinek had killed himself intentionally.

The bank books, showing Lillian Rosenfield to have been a wealthy woman, were found in the cellar room she occupied. There she slept on a rickety bed that had no mattress and that stood behind a window blocked by cardboard boxes.

TALENT FARMERS PASSING PETITION KILL TRUCK LAW

Petitions, seeking immediate relief from the Oregon Motor Transportation law of 1923 and the Oregon Produce Dealers' and Peddlers' act of the same year, are in circulation in Medford today through sponsorship of Talent farmers and truckmen. The petitions ask relief through Governor Meier, from the "burden of the excessive tax imposed by these acts."

Decision, handed down today by Attorney General Van Winkle, announced that trucks, marketing seasonal crops, would be exempt from the tax. If this action is taken, the farmers will still be faced with the provisions of the Produce Dealers' and Peddlers' act, which C. F. Estes, mayor of Talent, stated this afternoon are oppressive and very damaging to any return of prosperity in his community.

The petitions, which are also in circulation in Ashland, Talent and Phoenix, will be forwarded to the governor to be in his hands in time for the meeting of utilities representatives and state police, called for Tuesday, Mr. Estes stated today.

They already carry more than 300 signatures and he expects to have 1000 signers, when they go into Salem.

The petitions in Medford are to be found at the Franklin grocery and at George Barton's.

APPLIGATE RESIDENCE IS DESTROYED BY FIRE

The house, temporarily occupied by Capt. B. R. McMahon of the OCG in the Applegate country, was destroyed by fire last night, which drew many people from swimming holes to the scene of the conflagration.

The house was located on the Applegate river near the Beaver creek bridge and that fire was conquered before forest damage resulted, although the section is quite heavily wooded. Origin of the fire was not determined.

World War Still Writes Headlines in Newspapers

By Raymond Crowley.

NEW YORK, July 28.—(AP)—Nineteen years ago today certain officials dipped their pens in ink and wrote the headlines for today's newspapers. The ink, flowing in tiny stream on parchment, gushed to a mighty torrent on the front pages of the world—heralding the outbreak of the world war.

The headlines, black as woe, told of Austria-Hungary declaring war on Serbia on July 28, 1914, of Russia ordering a mobilization the next day; then of the others jumping in.

Today that ink still splashes on page one. A count shows that of all the headlines on front pages of New York morning dailies today 70 per cent deal with subjects which have been traced—directly or indirectly, in whole or in part, by one savant or another—back to the world war.

"Chicago Indicts Al Capone and 28 in War on Rackets"—how many times has the world been told that the war bred lawlessness, which fostered racketeering?

"Gov. Lehman Acts to Put State Behind 'IRA Drive'"—how many men have pointed to the world war as the cause of the severity of the depression?

"Spain to Recognize Soviet Russia." The traces of war ink hadn't trickled from his pen to parchment 10 years ago?

"Kidnapers Doomed to Death." Is that, too, as some would contend, a result of war-spawned crime?

"O'Ryan Is Chosen by Fusion Group to Run for Mayor." That's Maj. Gen. John F. O'Ryan of the 27th division, which helped smash the Hindenburg line.

"World Economic Parley Ends." Would it ever have had to begin, except for the world war?

Some say that, though the fighting has ceased, the world war still goes on. Certainly the mailed fist is still perching headlines, not only on page one, but right through to the financial section.

Not all of them, though. One headline today says: "Vast Continent Sank Below Sea Eons Ago."

It sank, yet life went on. Perhaps a philosopher could draw a lesson from that.

PEACH, APRICOT PRICE FIXED BY LOCAL GROWERS

The stone fruit organization recently created by the Medford Chamber of Commerce, composed of four Ashland growers and three local growers, met at the Chamber of Commerce last night and a definite understanding was brought about regarding local markets for this year's crop.

Those who attended the meeting from Ashland include Thornton S. Wiley, Homer Moore, W. Mates, E. H. Wilson, while C. A. Wing, S. W. Richardson, Vance Walcott and Robert Fowler represented Medford.

Several meetings of growers have been held, both in Medford and Ashland and last night's meeting was a culmination of the work of various committees, which have been endeavoring to bring the growers and the growers of Ashland and Medford together.

It has been definitely determined by the growers that the price to the stores this year will be apricots, 30

MRS. VOORHIES TO AID IN DRAFTING LIQUOR CONTROL

For the benefit of growers and grocers who desire information regarding Oregon standards for apricots, the Chambers of Commerce of Ashland and Medford have received from the department of Agriculture, State of Oregon, circulars which are available to those who require same.

The local fruit is now on the market and it is hoped that housewives will start canning immediately so that local growers may be assisted in marketing their crops.

Dr. Knox revealed that he favors a system similar to that of Canada or Sweden, as their distribution features. He objects to the Canadian system of price, but believes a compromise can be reached which would meet the Oregon condition.

Serving with Dr. Knox on the commission are Mrs. David Honyman, John A. Laing, Roscoe C. Nelson, John J. Beckman, Amodeo M. Smith, Senator Jay H. Upton of Bend, Dr. Ralph A. Fenton, Senator Isaac E. Staples, Frank Peterson, and Mrs. Gordon Voorhies of Medford.

The findings of the commission will be reported to the governor. A special session of the legislature will then be called to consider these recommendations and enact legislation to put them, or other suggestions, into effect.
