Ruth Chatterton Coming Tuesday In Craterian Hit

Once again Ruth Chatterton has established her right to be considered the first dramatic actress of her generation upon the screen, by virtue of her performance as the star of "Lilly Turner," which comes to Hunt's Craterian Tuesday.

It is not too much to assert that no other star could have equalled her astounding delineation of the soiled, bedraggled queen of the carnival and sideshows who emerges, through tragedy, to a loftiness of self-sacrifice that brought hundreds of plaudits from the spectators.

In its tremendous sweep Ruth Chatterton's "Lilly Turner" recalls no other performance save one or two of the star's most outstanding successes. It ranks in power with her "Madame X" though there is no son in this story to lend the unique note of pathos that only such a situation as the one climaxing the famous French play can give.

New Star Appears In Rialto Picture

Fortune smiled on Jack LaRue, young New Yorker, when George Raft refused to take the leading male role in "The Story of Temple Drake," picture version of William Faulkner's startling novel, which comes to the Rialto Tuesday.

LaRue, who had been playing minor roles in Hollywood for nearly two years, suddenly found himself elevated to a leading role—a role opposite Miriam Hopkins; a role originally written for Raft. So well did he perform, in the opinion of studio executives, that he is to have other important characterizations in forthcoming feature pictures.

LaRue's work as the priest in "A Farewell to Arms" is what actually won him the male lead in "The Story of Temple Drake." But he has long years of stage training to back up his two important movie roles.

Berkeley, Calif., Aug. 7.—(UP)—Deciding it is high time to learn a bit of music, Mrs. Lillie C. Rood, 75 of Sacramento, became the oldest coed at the University of California today. She enrolled in the extension school for 15 lessons in a music course, and plans to go "on and on."

Warner Not Asprant To the Editor: Sunday's issue of the Mail Tribune carried a news story in which I, along with others was listed as a possible aspirant for the position of county judge. So far as I am concerned this article is in error.

Very respectfully, W. J. WARNER.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—(AP)—The stock market drifted indifferently today through one of the year's duller seasons, with traders and investors hugging the side lines. Most leading issues followed an extremely narrow range. The close was moderately irregular. Transfers approximated 700,000 shares.

Brokers reported the new trading regulations, including higher margins and other restriction designed to curb excessive speculation, had diminished the pace of even the largest operators.
