

SALLY HAS DUDS JUDGE DISCOVERS WHEN SUIT FILED

Chicago Fan Dancer Escapes Court Penalty — Judge Says It's 'Boobs' Own Business if Money Spent

By SAM KNOTT
United Press Staff Correspondent.
CHICAGO, Aug. 18.—(UP)—A Los Angeles company came to Sally (nude dancer) Rand's rescue in an unusual manner today when it sued her for her clothes and thus gave official credence to her own claim that she has some.

Sally, by way of explanation, is the girl who recently created such a furore at a century of progress exposition because it was claimed by a woman attorney, she danced in the streets of Paris in a concession without any clothes on.

That lawsuit ended in victory for Miss Rand because the judge who heard the case ruled that anybody who would pay to see a nude dancer was a "boob" and that if "the boob" wanted to spend their money that way it was their own business, not the court's.

The real victory for Miss Rand came later, however, when additional thousands of world fair goers crowded about her dance pavilion nightly in the hopes of seeing her do the things she was accused of.

That led to more complaints and an order from fair officials for all nude performers to put on some clothes. Another nude dancer complied by wearing red flannel underwear, got a big laugh from the crowds and cashed in on Miss Rand's publicity. Sally, meanwhile, continued as popular as ever and finally her fans reached such a point that she quit the fair entirely and began dancing in the biggest theater in Chicago. She was arrested, of course, and that made the crowds bigger the next night.

Throughout all this furore, Sally contended that she really had not been dancing nude at all, that she wore "clothes" all the time and that people just thought she didn't wear any.

The public, however, expressed doubts about that claim and even expressed some doubts that Sally had clothes because every time she had her picture taken she wore either not any or not many.

Today's suit, filed by the Hepner-Harr Goods company of Los Angeles, was short lived and resulted in another victory for Miss Rand. The judge, Francis Borelli, dismissed the case.

The Western company charged that Miss Rand has owed them $21.30 and sought to attach her "clothes or other property" for the bill. It was not stated whether the wig had been used by Miss Rand in her now famous fan dance, in which some blond locks and two fans comprise her wardrobe.

EX-NEBRASKANS TO HOLD PICNIC ASHLAND SUNDAY

A big "get-together" picnic is planned for next Sunday at 2 o'clock by former Nebraskans. For some time there has been the wish that the large number of people from Nebraska who now live in southern Oregon and northern California could get together once a year in an annual picnic. Plans have been perfected to hold this first picnic in beautiful Lithia park in Ashland.

2 STATE DOLLARS NEEDED TO COAX ONE OF FEDERAL

Oregon Relief Committee Given Terms of Govern- ment's Willingness to Aid — Extra Session Hinted

PORTLAND, Aug. 18.—(UP)—Pierce Williams, western representative of the Federal Relief administration, today told the state relief committee that Oregon must advance two dollars for every one contributed by the federal government, or no federal money will be forthcoming.

The state committee, appointed by Governor Meier and headed by Raymond B. Wilcox as chairman, met with Williams today. He said the statement of policy is backed by an ultimatum from the President, and has been applied by the relief administration to other states.

Enough Until Oct. 31.
The committee at once drafted a resolution to the governor. This resolution stated that "practically every subdivision of the state has exhausted its resources and cannot contribute any substantial part of local relief costs," and that the committee "with funds now in hand or that can be made available, estimated that with proper economies the relief problem in the state can be met until October 31."

FINE PROGRAM BY ELKS' LODGE BAND AT PARK TONIGHT

The Medford Elks' band, under the direction of F. Wilson Wait, will entertain the public this evening with another eagerly awaited concert in the city park, beginning at 8 o'clock.

legally constituted unemployment fund to which no payments have been made" was provided by the last legislature, and that "authority exists for the board of control to transfer available balances from other funds to this account."

Based on these circumstances, the committee resolved "that the state relief committee request the board of control to transfer all available unexpended or unencumbered balances in all funds to said unemployment relief fund."

The chairman of the committee was authorized "to confer with the governor as to ways and means of meeting this problem, either by calling a special session of the legislature for the consideration of proper financial methods, or otherwise."

In Multnomah county and Portland, $4,000,000 in bonds has been provided in the past two years for relief work, and all of this has been spent except about $150,000 of city of Portland bonds, which have been offered for sale, with no bidder.
