"Shame on Seely"—That's what some of Seely Hall's friends were saying today. All because they saw the former local flying champion, recently transferred to Seattle by the United Air Lines, walking down the railroad platform. Interviewed, Mr. Hall insisted that he hadn't been riding the train, if he did have a bag in hand, and announced that he would take his accusers for a spin they wouldn't forget, if he heard any more out of them.

MEAL IN ASHLAND PUTS VAGRANT IN JAIL THIRTY DAYS

Lyle Cain, charged with vagrancy, was sentenced yesterday by Justice of the Peace William R. Coleman to serve 30 days in the county jail. Cain entered the Plaza restaurant in Ashland, ordered a meal, ate it, then ordered some sandwiches to take out. While the waitress was in the kitchen getting the sandwiches Cain departed leaving his meal unpaid.

The warrant against Cain charges that he is physically able to work, but for ten days made no effort to secure employment. He is a transient.

County authorities and the state police have started a campaign against auto tramps and other transients, who are classified as "living by their wits." Walking off without paying for a meal, "mooching" and "short-changing" are classified as living by their wits.

The Oregon law is rather strict about such wittiness. J. C. Young, local youth, arrested last Saturday while returning from the Jacksonville jubilee charged with reckless driving, was fined $25 and given until September 15th to pay it.

Young is alleged to have passed a long line of autos, at a high rate of speed without due regard for the safety of others.

The past week 15 or more autoists with foreign license plates on their autos have been hauled into justice court by the state police, fined for possession of improper licenses, and directed to procure an Oregon license.

The offenders were fruit laborers from Washington and California. More arrests along the same line are anticipated.
