Activities of Legion Auxiliary

By Mrs. Cole Holmes
The Nebraska Legionnaire published a very good article that I am quoting as follows:

"As time passes, it is becoming more and more evident that there is a living side to the cloud that looms over the federal cuts in payments to the disabled veterans. Prior to the passage of the so-called Economy bill, there is no doubt but that the sentiment of the American people was swinging away from the World War veterans, due to the fact that many payments were being made to them which it was felt were not justified.

This fact was recognized by the veterans themselves, especially the representative group composing the American Legion. A move was on foot to get rid of the 'goldbricker' in this proposition of compensation and the like, and the legion had ready to present to the present special session of congress a program of payments which would have been just to the government and to the deserving veteran.

The legion's program was disregarded, and in a wave of hysteria congress unloaded onto the president the duty of drawing up a program of reduction in federal payments to war veterans. The men whom the president trusted to formulate this program made the mistake of going too far, betraying the men with the service-connected disabilities. Nobody had asked that the war disabled be deprived of the payments that are their just due. Yet the regulations put out to enforce the new Economy act crucified these men.

The American public is fair-minded. The evident injustices being done to World War veterans under the provisions of the new act didn't set well with the rank and file of American citizens. Each one of them is willing to acknowledge that the nation owes a debt to the man who was disabled in its defense. So when the American Legion began to fight back on behalf of the disabled, public sentiment quickly formed to say that the legion is right. That is the bright side to the cloud, for nothing could have happened to swing public sentiment back to the veterans more quickly than the mistake of putting the disabled on the cross."

The national legislative committees of the Legion and Auxiliary are keeping an eye on the legislation dealing with the veteran and also the legislation is favorable at present yet it is not as liberal as could be wished for in regard to cases where the veteran is deceased and it is a question of pension for widow or orphan. In some cases the disabled veteran himself is not able to produce the necessary records as in the case of shell shock victims or those in the insane wards. These men must be taken care of and as they were disabled in the defense of the government then the nation should continue to maintain hospitals for such cases.

Announce Meeting At Armory Friday

After summer vacation the Daughters of Union Veterans will resume regular sessions, beginning this week. Although they have not met regularly several pleasant events have called them together at various times.

A Bank's Province...
Frequently Misunderstood
There is no place in a bank's function to furnish the capital for enterprise. That is a matter for private investors who thus become partners in a project.
After the enterprise has been organized and has proved its successful operation—then the bank can assist with short term loans to meet seasonal requirements.
Thus, while the bank can greatly assist the carrying on of enterprise—be it individual or corporate, it cannot act as financial backer.
