THIS KITCHEN TALKS ABOUT ITSELF.

HERE is the kitchen that talks about itself. It's one of the innumerable features at A Century of Progress—Chicago's World's Fair. There are no attendants in this kitchen, but as crowds gather around the General Electric exhibit, a voice from an unseen source announces that this is the last word in kitchen equipment. As if by magic, the door of the electric refrigerator opens and the voice, coming apparently from the refrigerator, relates how the refrigerator saves money for the owner. Then a spotlight falls on the electric range, the oven door lowers and the voice tells how speedily, economically and automatically the electric range prepares meals. Again, the spotlight turns to the electric dishwasher, the lid raises, water turns on automatically and the voice explains how the electric dishwasher saves time, money and the housewife's hands.
