

RELIEF OFFICIAL SAYS MAIN NEED REGAINED MORALE

Reynolds Tells Local Workers 'Hand Out' of Food, Clothing Not Sole Requirement of Depression

Inspiring many Jackson county people to a greater spirit of co-operation, described as the outstanding need in conquering dangerous conditions, resulting from unemployment in the United States, Clarence Reynolds, field representative of the state relief work under the federal program, addressed the crowd gathered at the court house auditorium yesterday at the meeting sponsored by the Jackson County Public Health association.

Speaking in sympathetic and earnest language, the lecturer urged his listeners to do something more than "hand out food and clothing." The job before all, he declared, is to rehabilitate and place people back in society as useful members. People must be helped to regain their morale, he further stated, describing the unhealthy condition of today as a mental one, a "physiological sickness," caused by the wrong mental attitude, which has been gradually developed under unemployment.

"We must have mental health to restore our morale," he declared. "And the future reinvigoration must be through sympathetic appreciation of the recipient's needs." While on this particular phase, the speaker then urged all social workers to understand thoroughly the individual before prescribing for him.

Defining good mental health, the need of America today, Mr. Reynolds stated, "It is an adjustment of the inner self to strains, inner and outer, in a manner reasonably satisfactory to self and others."

Lasting some of the objectionable results unemployment has brought, which may become really dangerous to society, Mr. Reynolds placed first the increased tension in home life. That tension, he stated, "is greater this year than ever before." Second he referred to the problem of the adolescent youths, out of high school with nothing to do. They are wandering today, Mr. Reynolds said, 500,000 strong, and their march is indicative of broken morale.

Third, Mr. Reynolds pointed to the ever-increasing tendency to take up types of philosophy, such as cults and fortune telling, as alleviation. These, he described as "not always healthy," in that they bring a lowering of the self-reliance of peoples.

A disorder is a mental disorder, when the roots are mental, Mr. Reynolds explained, placing emphasis again upon the need to conquer the wrong mental attitude before it becomes a disease. "No character breaks in a moment—the change depends upon the mental resources we have built up." The aim of social workers today, he added, must be to build up those resources.

Recommending correctives, the speaker declared: "Mental hygiene has no panacea for the problem. Case workers must take each case on its own merits and find resources for the individual."

Organized recreation, a casting aside of rugged individualism and the adoption of co-operation in all recreation was advised. Community choral singing, folk dancing, lodge meetings, and old-fashioned neighborliness—all can be used to help humanity, Mr. Reynolds stated.

Preceding the lecture of Mr. Reynolds, Attorney Porter J. Neff addressed the audience, urging support of the National Recovery Act campaign here, and presenting the need in an educational manner.

"Life is a survival of the fittest, but we do not get far in any evolution until something else enters in. That something is co-operation," he declared. "Until the specie acquires that, survival is not assured. NRA is an attempt to solve the problem. Buy from those who co-operate, affiliate. Charity is dead to the recipient. So to do most—spend. Consume things that it takes labor to produce."

Miss Mildred Carlton, president of the Health association, presided at yesterday's meeting, and the members of the Gold Hill unit acted as hostesses of the afternoon.

never be known," he declared, "as many bodies in sections flooded by the Panama river were undoubtedly washed to sea."

General Macias declared martial law Sunday night, a few hours after the 125-mile-an-hour wind struck. Mrs. W. E. Evans of the American consulate, after a tour of the hospitals, reported that no Americans or other foreigners were among the victims.

This correspondent, during a flight over the city, saw several hundred persons on a railroad track at one point, signalling for aid. From the air the city, an important oil port, appeared to be a mass of wreckage, with houses unroofed, trees uprooted and streets filled with debris. Water, in places four feet deep, was on three sides of Tampico.

Prisoners Escape. When the storm was at its height Sunday night, prisoners in the municipal jail staged a concerted break, and 15 escaped. Two were killed by guards.

Most of the deaths and injuries occurred in the poorer sections where residents, reluctant to leave their possessions, delayed their flight too long.

A 7 o'clock curfew has been established, with violators warned they will be shot on sight.

In four of the devastated areas the correspondent saw large sections in which no building remained intact. A number of ships at harbor, although they had been warned, suffered in the storm.

Mayor Jose Tarrega estimated the damage at between $2,800,000 and $3,300,000. He said the cyclone blew furiously for 12 hours.

DR. DURNO DECIDES FISHING FINE FUN

Dr. E. R. Durno was one of those people who couldn't waste his time fishing, but after Jack Wurts took him to the Rogue river Saturday afternoon and he successfully brought in the limit of steelhead, the doctor is anxiously awaiting his next chance to bring home the fish.

Dr. Durno experienced many a thrill battling among the slippery rocks in the river to land the gammy fish. He had one large steelhead, which, because of its weight straightened out the hook the doctor was using. This was the doctor's first fishing trip of the season.

one would call an easy time of it. The postmaster general could easily hand out thousands more jobs than he has at his disposal.

Demands for services rendered in the last campaign continue to pile high on his desk at the post office department. As compared with his predicament, senators and congressmen have few worries.

There have been indications that the White House recognizes this, too. Orders have been given, well-informed circles hear, that as many jobs as possible are to be left at Feriey's disposal.

How it all will turn out remains to be seen.

There's no particular indication at present that Jim Farley is graying over the rumblings that seem to come from the direction of Capitol Hill.

ELBERT BAKER, LEADER IN NEWSPAPER WORLD, PASSES IN CLEVELAND

CLEVELAND, Sept. 27.—(AP)—Elbert Hall Baker, who, in his own words, liked "to see a paper striving to improve the community in which it is located," died last night at the age of 79, after 35 years of planning and building for the Cleveland Plain Dealer and the city itself.

He was chairman of the board of the Plain Dealer Publishing company, and as a leader in the newspaper field throughout the country has served as a director of the Associated Press since 1916, as director of the American Newspaper Publishers' association from 1907 to 1924, and as president of the association from 1912 to 1914.

From the time he and Charles E. Kennedy leased the Plain Dealer from L. E. Holden in 1898 to operate it on a profit-sharing basis as a "sporting proposition"—to see if they could "bring the animal to life"—Baker
