FILMS PLAYERS ELOPE TO MEXICO

William Cagney, actor, and his bride, Patricia "Boots" Mallory, actress, as they returned to Hollywood after an elopement to Agua Caliente, Mexico. (Associated Press Photo)

Clara Bow, the red-headed film star may be more careful in the future about obeying literally her script instructions.

But last night she proved she could "make it" on the chin and come up smiling if a bit groggy.

It was a free-for-all fight scene in her new picture, Clara, as a circus performer standing on a platform, was supposed to leap from her comparative safety into the scrapping mob to the rescue of a fellow player.

She leaped—and connected with the fist of an unidentified battler.

Clara reeled but the camera kept grinding. When they carried her off, witnesses said, she was reciting lines from her last film. She was sent home to bed, but was expected at work again today.

PORTLAND, Ore., Sept. 28.—(AP)—Action above industry, above bust-invested wealth failed, of recommendation by the Gill subcommittee of the governor's relief committee of 32 when a tie vote resulted at yesterday's meeting here. The vote was 3 to 3. A majority vote was necessary in order to effect the recommendation.

Ray W. Gill, chairman of the subcommittee; Ben T. Osborne, executive secretary of the state federation of labor, and Harry Gross voted for the recommendation and Bert Haney, John F. Logan and D. M. Webb voted against it. Jack H. Luthin, seventh member of the committee, was absent. Previously, however, he had expressed his opposition to such a measure.

SALEM, Ore. (UP)—Whether Thomas Hughes of Altura, California, conducts his logging operations in Oregon or California would be rather difficult to determine.

Hughes is engaged in logging an 80-foot tract of timber situated just above the boundary line on the Oregon side. Many of the trees, though cut on Oregon territory, fall over into California.

As result, many times Hughes finds himself in the peculiar position of cutting timber in Oregon, but logging it out in California.

INSURANCE POLICIES CITIZENSHIP FACTOR DECLARES PRESIDENT

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—(P)—President Roosevelt telegraphed the national association of life underwriters in convention here that the insurance policy plays an important part in the background of the American family.

"Insurance, and particularly life insurance, plays a very important part in our national picture. It affords to the individual a margin of safety for his loved ones, thus enabling him to go about his business unhampered by fear for them in the event of accident or death and giving him wider latitude in his undertakings.

"The merits of life insurance have now come to be well recognized and the insurance policy plays an important part in the background of the American family. In bringing this about, you have rendered an outstanding service, and by the same token you have contributed a large part to our national progress.
