

COUNTY OFFICIALS GAIN NEW HOPE IN FINANCE PROBLEM

County Judge Earl B. Day and District Attorney George A. Coddington have returned from a conference at Salem with state officials relative to Jackson county financial tangles. Both officials report that the sessions were satisfactory and that many of the vexatious details were adjusted. Legal opinions of the state attorney general's office were obtained upholding the present course of the county court.

The officials spent two days conferring with state officials and the local situation was thoroughly discussed from all angles.

The Jackson county officials were advised that, under Oregon law, expenditures for relief and unemployment did not come under the liability clauses. This is one of the heaviest items in the local situation. Relief of the worthy poor, employment and the commissary last winter were a heavy drain on the county exchequer.

Close to $30,000 was expended in the restoring of law and order in the prosecution of the Banks-Pehl turmoil incidents. This expenditure was authorized by the state and is a county obligation owed to the state and comes under the head of emergency expenditures.

By spreading the emergency fund of approximately $8000 thin over the balance of the year, for the maintenance of county offices, County Judge Earl B. Day hopes to weather the present stringency until January 1.

The clerk's and sheriff's offices, due to the heavy expenses of the Banks-Pehl turmoil, are close to their budget allowances, as well as other offices, which were limited by the last budget committee. The special session of the legislature if, and when, called is expected to take action for relief of the tax situation. All Oregon counties are in rough financial waters, due to non-tax payments. Jackson county, however, is the only county that was burdened with the cost of quelling a young revolution, and stilling its agitators.

Problems bequeathed to the county court are gradually being untangled and, with the exercise of business methods and application of economy principles in deeds as well as words, a partial return, at least, to normalcy is expected with the cooperation of citizens generally, and the 1933 budget committee, which will soon be named and start functioning.

5 DEER AND BEAR TAKEN BY PARTY

Five mule deer and a bear—that's the record achieved by C. L. McDonald and party of hunters in the eastern Oregon country, they announced today upon return to Medford. And in connection with the bear, there is a story, which only McDonald can tell, fellow hunters declared, refusing to go into the matter. And Mr. McDonald was not to be found this morning.

Other members of the hunt were: Charley Davis, C. N. Cully, Harry Morrow, Harold Woods, I. M. Gainer and Lester Welschberger. The deer were bagged in the country northeast of Burns.

MEDICAL SOCIETY TO MEET ON WEDNESDAY

The paper for the evening will be given by Dr. Mattie B. Shaw of Ashland and will be devoted to the subject of "Palaetocia," or parrot fever.
