GOOD HANDICAPS MAKE GOLF TILTS CLOSE STRUGGLES

Whoever arranged the handicaps for this year's P. A. T. golf tourney did a wonderful job of it. Never before have the matches been so close—such a thing as a one-sided contest being practically unknown. When one realizes that the best and the worst players in the club are grouped in one play-off, this is an extraordinary achievement. Extra hole contests are rapidly becoming the rule rather than the exception. Yesterday in the completion of the fourth round three ding-dong affairs went into extra holes. H. Husong finally put out Fritz Newhall one up on the 19th; Tunny was dormie four to West, then proceeded to do what he had to do, to save off defeat by bagging the next four holes and ending all square on the 18th. This gallant effort, however, was apparently too much for Earl for on the play-off West took the 19th hole and the West. Don Clark and D. B. Gray, a perfect David and Goliath duo, then proceeded to duplicate the Kellum-Ruhl endurance contest of the day before—being all square on the 18th, 19th and 20th. Clark finally emulating his Biblical predecessor by felling the Standard Oil giant on the 21st, in spite of the fact that the latter took off his shirt and waved his hammer-throwing biceps in the breeze.

There are now 12 men left in the P. A. T. struggle, the fifth round to be completed this week as follows: G. M. Roberts vs. Bob Hammond Jr.

J. B. Kirk vs. L. P. Wilcox. H. Husong vs. Don Clark. G. Jackson vs. T. Slater Johnston. B. H. Williams vs. H. B. Kellum. F. West vs. L. Carpenter.

Although golf is a notoriously uncertain game, local caddies are pretty shrewd gamblers and are picking Jack Kirk to grab the coveted trophy this year. He has a handicap of 18 and has not only been playing in the low 80's regularly, but has broken 80 the past two weeks several times.

Files Report—Miss Ruth Meusel of 1315 East Main street filed an accident report at the city police station today concerning a collision yesterday afternoon at one o'clock, at the corner of 13th and Newtown streets. E. P. Hutchings of 703 West Thirtieth street was driving the other automobile.

Fuson Called "Hunyan"—The biggest Paul Bunyan in the fishing game, was the title a number of his friends about town were giving Thos. J. Fuson, this morning. And the reason why could not be learned, except for references to a good fishing hole, which apparently failed to live up to its reputation.

English Walnuts Profitable—A J. Hornby "nut king" of Griffin Creek was in Medford today showing samples of his famous English walnuts grown on his property there. Mr. Hornby heartily agrees with the Mail Tribune that nuts can be made a most profitable and satisfactory crop in southern Oregon. He has netted as high as $125 a year from only three trees. He denies that pruning is not necessary, however, and favors the title a number of his friends about town were giving Thos. J. Fuson, this morning. And the reason why could not be learned, except for references to a good fishing hole, which apparently failed to live up to its reputation.

Surviving him are his widow, Eva Zoe Carpenter, and two sons, W. S. Carpenter of Grants Pass and Jesse R. Carpenter of Portland.

Mr. Carpenter, who was 67 years old, was born in Illinois, and came to Oregon in 1910, having made his home in Ashland mostly since that time. He resided in Medford for two years.

The visitors were Jim Johnson, pro from Seaside and J. LaRue, an 8 handicap man from the Multnomah club, Portland. Johnson shot 5 birdies in a row on the last 18, totaling a 68, two under par.

Jack Hueston was second with a 74, LaRue third with an 84, and Mansfield fourth, with an 89.

SILVER SCREEN REVIEW

By Mary Greiner Kelly.

While Will Rogers will never be hanged if creative acting becomes a crime, still, the old Oklahoma "Injun" has something the crowds want. And how they want it! Witness the capacity houses he drew throughout the continuous showing of "Doctor Bull" at Hunt's Craterian yesterday.

The showing is the homely, hick-town tale the title suggests, with Will doctoring everything from sick cows to human parasites, and getting blamed and loved in return by those among whom he labors. The climax is charged with so much human interest and heart appeal that Dr. Bull doesn't have to do anything but be Will Rogers to get over. And does it get over? Page the box office.

The fine, restrained acting of Louise Dresser is an added attraction. While she is cast on the opposite side of the fence from the hero of the story, she manages to gather in her usual quantity of laurels.

The play is well directed, excellently photographed and perfectly cast. In fact, all the town characters are there, including funny Andy Devine, as the village hypochondriac. You'll just sit back and have a grand time recognizing old friends.

Constance Bennett In Rialto Picture

"Bed of Roses," starring Constance Bennett and playing at the Rialto theatre, is undoubtedly Miss Bennett's best. As the reform school graduate who sets out to find herself a millionaire to give her a bed of roses, she shows that, given a real story, she can make it even better by turning it into a special piece of acting.

However, she finds herself at times hard pressed by a newcomer to the screen, a certain Pert Kelton. As Miss Bennett's slinky, hip-slinging girl friend, this same Pert Kelton almost walks off with the picture. Her characterization is of the Mae West type—all sex and, to her credit, she does it superbly.

Joel McCrea is again the leading man with John Halliday playing the role of the millionaire bachelor and Samuel Hinds turning in an effective comedy bit.

New Star Appears In Dietrich Film

Brian Aherne, heralded as the most romantic newcomer to Hollywood since the advent of talking pictures, makes his bow to film audiences as Marlene Dietrich's leading man in the star's new picture, "The Song of Songs," the opening attraction now playing at the Holly theatre.

Aherne made such a remarkable impression upon the nation's playgoers as Katherine Cornell's leading man in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," that screen producers competed in a wild scramble for his services. He rejected seven flattering offers, it is said, before he finally accepted the one to appear opposite Miss Dietrich.

Regulars in Action

All the regulars of both teams except Johnny Vergez, third sacker of the Giants, will be in action. Travis Jackson, his "Charley Brown" tamed, will replace Vergez and round up an infield composed of Terry, Hughie Critz and John (Blondy) Ryan. In the outfield will be Ott, George Davis and Joe Moore. Gus Mancuso will catch.
