WITNESSES TELL HOW MRS. MARTIN USED BUGGYWHIP

Henrietta B. Martin, president of the self-styled "Good Government Congress," her father, C. H. Brown, secretary of the organization and L. O. Van Wagon and E. L. Fitch, reputed "Congressmen" charged with "disorderly, riotous and violent conduct," as the result of an attempted buggy-whipping by Mrs. Martin of Leonard N. Hall, editor of the Jacksonville Miner last February 25, went on trial before a jury in circuit court this morning. All the defendants were more or less active in the late Banks-Felt turmoil.

The court ruled that the testimony be confined solely to what happened in front of the News office at the date specified and who took part in it. The court explained this would "prevent the introduction of collateral matters that have nothing to do with the alleged crime. We do not care anything about what happened before or after, or what people said or thought. The only issue before the court and jury are the circumstances surrounding the actual altercation."

Banks Opposed Action. Mrs. Janet Gueches, former secretary to L. A. Banks, local agitator, testified that Mrs. Martin came to Banks' home the afternoon of the episode, told her her plans to "whip young Hall." Banks, the witness said, "counseled against such a thing," but Mrs. Martin said "I have made up my mind."

"If you are determined, I will stand back of you," the witness declared Banks then said.

The witness said Mrs. Martin told her, "Mr. Martin was angry and would take the matter in his own hand, but I told him it was my personal affair, and I would handle it in my own way."

The witness testified Mrs. Martin told her "she feared bloodshed if the men met, as Hall has a permit to carry a pistol." Mrs. Gueches, with her husband, was seated in an auto across the street when the fracas started.

Brown Bought Whips. Verne Van Dyke, clerk at Lampport, testified that Brown came to the store in the morning and looked at two whips and returned in the afternoon and bought them. Van Dyke cut off the butt of one whip, so it would fit in Brown's pant leg. One end was placed in a sock to keep it from dropping out. The whip was introduced as "evidence." All the defense objected on the grounds it was "incompetent, immaterial and irrelevant, and not binding on Mrs. Martin."

Van Dyke testified Brown "preferred a whalebone whip."

Roy R. Shreve of "Your Office Boy" testified that about the time of the ruckus, there was quite a crowd around the News office, when he came to his business from supper, and just as he was entering the door, he saw Hall leave the News, when Fitch stopped him and Mrs. Martin appeared with a whip in her hand and struck the scribe with it. The crowd and the police gathered quickly around and Shreve saw no more hostility.

Paul Luy testified that a short time before the assault, he saw Brown peeping in the alley window of the News, "so I went out to see what he was up to." Luy, an employee of the News at the time, said he saw Fitch leaning against a lamp-post, and Mrs. Martin was seated in Van Wagon's auto. "Myself and the News and Brown were fusing around." The court ruled that Luy could not testify "that he felt something was going to happen." The defense held this would "be a conclusion of the witness."

Fitch Grabbed Hall. Hall came out of the News front door, Luy said, "and Fitch grabbed him by the arm and turned him around. Then Mrs. Martin hopped out of the auto and hit Hall twice with the buggy-whip she held in her hand." People came running from all directions, the witness said, and he further testified "McKittrick, captain of the Banks Guards was shouting around and a number of people known as Banks Guards were on the sidewalk."

Under cross-questioning by Attorney Enright, Luy denied "you know as a matter of fact Fitch grabbed Hall by the coat-tail and tried to hold him back," or that Hall "climbed with Mrs. Martin." Luy said Hall "only put his hands on Mrs. Martin's shoulders." Attorney Enright queried if "Sheriff Schermerhorn was not present," and the witness replied "Schermerhorn had been arrested for ballot-theft about the time of the whipping." The court then asked: "What has Schermerhorn got to do with this case, anyway?" and halted further questioning along that line.

"Beat Hell Out of Him." Harry Moore testified he was walking up the street and passed Brown, Fitch and a man by the name of Croft, standing in the alley, and heard Brown say: "When he comes out the door, grab him and beat hell out of him." The witness saw Hall

Adolph Bowser, another of the sextet, served one year in the Montana state prison for grand larceny. When attendant Charles C. The men had saved their way out of their cells, advanced along the corridor and hidden by a gate.

Release Others. After felling Williams, they took his keys, let out two other inmates and made their way from the third story of the hospital to the back of the building where they escaped. Presently Williams regained consciousness and spread the alarm.

Guards at the state penitentiary and crews with trained bloodhounds were summoned to assist in the hunt.

JEROME, BANWELL OFF TO LINE UP JUBILEE SUPPORT

To fire the opening guns in preparation for the celebration here of Oregon's seventy-fifth birthday, E. C. "Jerry" Jerome, celebration chairman and A. H. Banwell, manager of the Medford chamber of commerce, left this afternoon by motor for Portland.

"We are off," they declared. "The celebration is on. Plans for the birthday party are underway," as they rolled out of the city northward.

In Portland they will confer with Governor Julius L. Meier and Mayor Joseph K. Carson regarding the state-wide anniversary, to be centered in Medford next summer.

The Manufacturers' association will be visited in Portland for development of plans for the industrial exhibits, anticipated as a part of the program here. Amusement companies will be contacted to lineup features for the big celebration, including horse racing, of course.

The Medford representatives will probably remain in Portland for three days. Mr. Banwell will also confer with leaders of the National Recovery administration while in the northern city. And if the two return to Medford with as many assurances as they brought back from Redding, Cal., last week, the trip will be very worthwhile, business men declared today.

Word that Pete Belcastro, scrappy Sacramento Italian grapple, will meet George Wilson, former University of Washington gridiron star, here Wednesday night at the armory has created more than usual interest among wrestling fans, as it is believed promoter Mack Lillard has pitted a pair of athletes who will be sure to check plenty of action in their unskilled one-hour main event match.

In addition to the main event, Lillard will toss in the always impressive Al Karasick with a new playmate—Jack Kogut of Toronto, Ont. They are scheduled to go one hour also, unless sufficient falls are registered before the time elapses.

SILVER SCREEN REVIEW

By Mary Greiner Kelly.

Another gleaming star belongs behind the name of George (Miracle Man) Arliss, who, above all other actors, is able to resurrect the historical dead from their graves and revitalize them to the quivery pitch of modern entertainment demands. "Voltaire," based on the life of the great French philosopher, which opened yesterday at Hunt's Crater, is his latest, and in some ways his best.

There is always an artistic completeness about an Arliss production which sets it apart from others laying claims to greatness. "Voltaire" is no exception. Ebbing on from smooth opening to well rounded conclusion, with the climax a grippingly dramatic one, the play is practically impossible to analyze in part. With the final scene, one sees the picture as a whole, a picture thoroughly entertaining and utterly satisfying.

"Voltaire," with long, skilful eloquent hands, penetrating eyes, and fiery soul of poet and philosopher, lives as only Arliss can make him live. Decca Kenyon is a beautiful and effective Madame Pompadour. Reginald Owen is perfect as the weak but charming Louis the Fifteenth, and the rest of the cast are harmoniously up to standard.
