Fine Cast Appears In Craterian Film

Katharine Hepburn and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., comprise the sensational star team presented in "Morning Glory."

Since she aspired to stardom in her first picture, "A Bill of Divorcement," the dynamic Miss Hepburn has been the talk of the cinema world and has remained the screen's most interesting personality. Fairbanks, Jr., long has been one of the screen's most popular young stars.

A supporting cast, commensurate with the brilliance of the co-stars is to be found in "Morning Glory," with Adolphe Menjou, Mary Duncan, Fredric Santley, C. Aubrey Smith, Richard Carle, Tyler Brooke and Don Alvarado playing important roles.

Miss Hepburn is seen as a girl who fights and wins a gallant struggle for stage recognition, and Young Fairbanks portrays a New York playwright. Menjou, in a characterization which ranks in importance with those of the co-stars, portrays a Broadway producer.

Lowell Sherman, who scored such a hit with the recent Mae West success, "She Done Him Wrong," directed. The screen story is based upon a play by Zoe Akina.

Nancy Carroll Has Role Rialto Drama

The devastation that a kiss may cause is shown in a new light in "The Kiss Before the Mirror," at the Rialto theater for three days, starting today. Frank Moran, Nancy Carroll, Paul Lukas and Gloria Stuart are featured.

How one man's kissing his wife while she was arranging her toilette before the boudoir mirror resulted in her dishonorable death, his disgrace, and caused another man, his best friend, to doubt his own wife's fidelity, is shown with vivid dramatic force.

Paul Lukas plays the role of the jealous husband who shoots his wife after discovering her guilt in the boudoir mirror. Frank Moran is his lawyer friend whose own wife is guilty of the same indiscretions, who wins an acquittal for his friend, and after doing so, sets out to kill his wife. High drama occurs in the court room as the wronged husband makes a plea for his client, trying at the same time his wife, seated in the gallery. The entire picture is set against a background of music that emphasizes the dramatic situations.

A selected program of short subjects is on the same bill.

Zane Grey Picture Coming Holly Bill

The bitter drama of an old family feud is matched by the romance between two members of the warring clans in Paramount's "To the Last Man," a Zane Grey outdoor romance which comes to the Holly screen tomorrow.

Based upon an actual feud carried from the Kentucky mountains to the Tonto Basin in Arizona, the Zane Grey story is chock-full of the bitterness of the clan war that ravaged the Arizona plains for generations.

The picture is splendidly cast with Randolph Scott, Esther Ralston, Buster Crabbe and Jack LaRue in leading roles. "To the Last Man" tells of the war to death between the Hayden and Colby clans. Mark Hayden, at the close of the Civil War, determines to end the bloodshed, takes his family by wagon-train to Arizona. Here, for 15 years, they live in peace, until his old enemy Jed Colby learns of the location of the Hayden ranch, comes to renew the fight.
