

COUNCIL NOTES A CHANGE OF HEART ON MAIN ST. PLAN

First National bank, the Medynski estate, E. T. Allen of the Allen hotel, Palm and Nidermeyer, and John Barnsbury.

Property owners of the stretch between Central and Bartlett streets also demonstrated. In that list were named: Ed Wilkinson, C. I. Hutchinson, Elizabeth Deuel, Isabel Trumbull, E. H. Lamport, the directors of the Jackson County bank, and Scott V. Davis.

Called upon by Mayor E. M. Wilson to give an explanation of the situation, Mr. Hubbard stated that "many have evidently had a change of heart. We are much surprised to see a number of names in that column." He then added that Mr. Lamport and Mr. Davis had both stated that they were very much in favor of the move.

Dr. B. R. Elliott, another advocate of the street widening, added that E. Harder, president of the First National bank, had told him he had no objections to the widening.

The matter was then referred to the street and road finance committee, with the time for hearing of objections to the improvement continued to the next meeting of the city council.

Informing that the next meeting of the council was three weeks distant, Mr. Hubbard protested further. He stated that with completion of the Tiller-Trail highway, traffic over the bridge would be greatly increased. He also pointed out that lighting of the imperative stage, should not be done until the street is widened, or extra expense would be involved.

Councilman W. M. Clendenen moved that the improvement be started as soon as possible, but the motion failed into discussion, inspired by an objection from Councilman C. C. Purans, who declared that the bridge should not be widened unless the whole street was widened.

Councilman Darby, asked for his opinion, declared he could never see any sense in widening the street. Hubbard remarked that if the council had gone ahead with the original petition, when it was presented, the whole street would have been widened before the property owners got cold feet.

Councilman Al Littrell then suggested that the council proceed under the original petition, but the matter ended in the hands of the committee, members of which were instructed that a special meeting of the council would be called, when they are ready to report.

CHILDRENS CLINIC BY SPECIALISTS UNDERWAY TODAY

Children from all sections of Jackson county, whose health and happiness are threatened by mental and physical handicaps, are going through the Alex Sparrow memorial clinic today, receiving examinations of Dr. Richard E. Dillehunt, orthopedic specialist, and Dr. H. Dixon, psychiatrist, in one of the outstanding projects of Jackson county for the benefit of mankind.

The two men, brought here from Portland on the invitation of the Jackson County Medical society and the Jackson County Public Health association, are conducting the clinic throughout the day. They are checking on a number of cases examined on previous visits here to determine whether or not there have been improvements, and are examining a number of new cases.

Scheduled for appearance this morning were 19 children from the Medford schools, for the attention of Dr. Dillehunt, and 16 for Dr. Dixon's examination. The cases were arranged by Mrs. Ruth Swanson Dodson, Medford school nurse.

Cases outside the Medford schools numbered 31 for Dr. Dillehunt and 22 for Dr. Dixon.

A group of private cases were also receiving the attention of the two well-known physicians and several patients were brought here this morning from Klamath Falls to take advantage of the opportunity for examination by the two specialists.

The cases outside the Medford schools were arranged by the city nurses, and all phases of the clinic were being aided today by members of the Jackson County Public Health association, headed by Miss Mildred Carlton and a staff of helpers.

J. C. Barnes Answers Oregonian

Open letter to the Editor of the Oregonian:

In your Wednesday's editorial in the Oregonian, commenting on the articles on "Inflation to Make Jobs and Stabilize Dollar Value," appearing in the Medford Mail Tribune, you "beg" the question, unashamed and proud of it. You are certain that the "number of persons so few who have given close study to the question that even a tyro can discuss it without fear of humiliating contradiction." That might be a fact were they the readers of the Oregonian, but it is not so with the readers of the Medford Mail Tribune. Already some 20 of these readers who do not understand the proposal, have gotten together, unsolicited by myself, and are arranging for the publication and distribution of these articles in pamphlet form, and in due time, no doubt, you will get a copy.

The editor of the Oregonian reminds me of a little girl, three years old, who, when I asked her if she would spell her name for me, soberly replied, "I don't know how to spell my name, and I am proud of it." But her parents had already informed me that she did know how to spell her name. She thought it was amusing and perhaps took less mental effort just not to do it.

The editor of the Oregonian must be aware of the fact that there are around ten million men out of work. And that Portland is claiming her share of them. A great many of these men are heads of families. Many of them have not had steady employment for three years. These men can no longer be furnished jobs by those engaged in the manufacture and distribution of commodities. These men must be given permanent employment, even if we have to abandon our "worship of the golden calf" in order to do it. There is just one agency to undertake this task, and that is the federal government. In the articles referred to I pointed out that the federal government could put men to work in non-commodity producing enterprises and pay them in non-interest bearing treasury notes to be later liquidated out of increased income taxes that could be collected from those engaged in business benefited by increased demand and increased prices of commodities.

Now as to gold dollars. If Bob Ingersoll was here today, he would be quite confused as to whether the present dollar could look him in the eye and say, "I know that my redeemer liveth." We can no longer depend upon "Rebecca's gold bracelets" to guarantee the redemption of our currency. The commodity dollar, the value of which in commodities will be stabilized by our government, as outlined in my articles in the Medford Mail Tribune, will always "know that its redeemer liveth." Not only is it living, but is out and about the country, showing itself at all times and in all places.

The editor of the Oregonian seems positive that this experiment has been tried in the past. Possibly it is the one "Lycurgus, 13 centuries ago, experimented with." I am certain no nation in the past could have experimented with "commodity money," as outlined in my articles in the Medford Mail Tribune, as the control of the value of this money and the redemption of enough of it from time to time to stabilize its value is provided for through the imposition and collection of income taxes made possible by the prosperity that would follow its use as proposed. And no nation could put into effect the experiment until it had perfected machinery so that out of the surpluses of goods produced men engaged by the government in non-commodity producing enterprises could be supported, at least fed and clothed. We have just arrived when the perfection of the machine has made this possible. In the fact, it is compelling our government to do this very thing.

QUENTIN CONVICT COURTS DEATH IN DAREDEVIL DASH

SAN QUENTIN PRISON, Calif., Oct. 18.—(UP)—Undaunted by a stream of bullets that whistled harmlessly past him, James P. English, convict from Berkeley, fled over the prison wall late today but was captured by an unarmed guard.

The attempt to escape was so foolhardy that prison officials believed he may not have cared if death ended his break.

Before dusk settled, English climbed to the roof of a prison building. He defied commands of guards F. E. Spurgeon and Roland Cash, who trained rifles on him. He leaped across an eight foot court to the prison wall as bullets whistled past. Then he jumped 20 feet to the ground.

His ankle was sprained in the leap. Guard Chester Traston, off duty, pursued English and brought him down with a flying tackle.

English was still weak from four bullet wounds received after he failed in an attempt to hold up a drug store in Berkeley June 21. His wounds then were critical, but when a judge offered to move court to his bedside he refused, dressed and went to court.

He was kept in the convalescing prisoners' ward here.

SALEM, Oct. 18.—(AP)—Oregon and Washington will share employment benefits on the Bonneville dam project with Multnomah county in Oregon and Skamania county in Washington getting the first call.

Senator C. L. McNary today received details of employment procedure from Major C. F. Williams of the corp of war department engineers. Martin advised that 99 per cent of the employees would be on contractors' payrolls and would be selected from employment lists.

After the employment lists of the two counties (Multnomah and Skamania) are exhausted, the residents of the two states will have equal precedence. Major Williams stated. The chief of engineers ruled that all government employees will be selected from the civil service lists, with a few exceptions.

Looking Into the MILK BOTTLE

Milk is not a beverage in the strict sense of the word; neither is it a competitor of medicine. Milk contains more total solids than do many vegetables. We eat milk; we do not, as you may think, drink it. Milk is a food, and housewives demand three things of a food:

First, it must be pleasant tasting. Second, it must carry food nutrients that provide fuel and energy for the human body and make for health and happiness. Third, a food must be in line, so far as price is concerned, with other competing foods carrying the same amount of nutrients.

A quart of milk a day will normally give a person enough vitamin A to meet all requirements. Vitamin D is found in cream along with vitamin E. Below the cream line we find calcium, phosphorus, vitamin B, C and G, and casein albumen.

Communications

Declares Tribune is Generous. To the Editor: Many times in the past eight years I have gone to the Tribune office with notices of a religious nature, some of them often requiring as much as half column of space, and not once have I been refused; all free of charge, too.

In the past two weeks I have been astonished to read numerous religious notices, and because I feel that this courtesy is taken too much for granted, I am moved to express to you my deep appreciation for the many times I have been given free space in your paper. I wish to especially mention Mr. Ferguson and the two girls, Eva and Irya, all of whom have been so courteous to me as all times. I have never read a daily paper that gave so much attention to the religious life of its community. Please accept my thanks. MRS. WM. S. ULLAKOHE, General Superintendent Presbyterian Sunday School, Medford, October 18th.

WOODFORD PENNY SALE TOMORROW

The West Side pharmacy, Medford's Rexall store, will launch its much-anticipated annual One Cent sale tomorrow morning, and continue to offer Rexall products at the special prices until Saturday evening, October 21.

"Our One Cent sale is not a cut-rate affair due to the fact that all merchandise for the selling event is purchased especially for that purpose from the Rexall company," J. R. Woodford, manager of the West Side since 1917, said today.

Previous to 1917 this well-known pharmacy at the corner of West Main and Grape streets was owned by Dr. H. P. Hargrave, who established it in 1911. Annually for more than 15 years the West Side has conducted One Cent sales, and the present one is being held in conjunction with other Rexall stores throughout the United States. There are approximately 10,000 branches.

Extra salespeople will be employed during the three-day sale.

FOR GOODNESS' SAKE STOP THAT RACKET!

Don't let jangled nerves make childhood unhappy

When we suffer from jangled nerves we don't realize how harshly we speak. We wonder why we lose the love and respect of those who are close to us. That's the real danger of jangled nerves... the victim so seldom knows. And the more high-strung and alive you are, the greater the danger.

If things don't seem to be going so well—if money is on your mind—if you worry—then look out. Watch your nerves. Get your full amount of sleep. Eat regularly and sensibly. Find time for recreation. And smoke Camels—for Camel's costlier tobaccos never get on your nerves.

COSTLIER TOBACCOS
Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand of cigarettes!

CAMELS — THEY NEVER GET ON YOUR NERVES!

How are YOUR nerves?
TEST No. 4

How long will it take you to get out of this maze? Take your pencil (sharply pointed)—start at the center, and move out... But do not touch any of the original lines... 40 seconds is considered excellent time.
