Harvest Festival

AUTUMN—the time of harvest—when Nature in her battle for the bounties of Mother Earth surrenders to Jack Frost and leaves the fruits of her struggle for Mankind. Drive past the fields and where a few days ago the vines presented a panorama of green, all are now wilted and on the ground is the golden reward of the season's struggle.

Primitive man made much of the Autumn Harvest Festival. To him it was symbolical of human experience for in man as in nature seldom are the fruits of life revealed until the frosts of Autumn halt the struggle and they are brought to view.

Tomorrow, by special displays, we pay tribute to those who by foresight and industry have wrested from Mother Nature the fruits of her bounties.
