Ye Smudge Pot By Arthur Perry

The prediction that Oregon will be "dry again" in two years, is wrong. It will not take that long, if the politicians succeed in their current plan to make gin-mills more plentiful than gas holes, under the Home Rule, alias Home Rule plan.

Several citizens returned today from Portland, where they saw a football game, and a co-ed without a fur coat.

"Last—Calfskin purse containing $80 in bills. Purse belonged to undersigned; money to widow lady in dire need. Keep purse and return money to T. K. Jones, 389-L—(Winnemucca, Nev., Leader.) Oh yeah!"

The general public which has been bothered considerably with farm strikes, elections, managed dollars, and other items of no concern, will be delighted to learn that Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks, movie big bugs, will not get a divorce—not that the general public particularly cared what Mary and Doug did.

"The annual meeting of the Cemetery association was held Tuesday, and it was voted to keep people out of the cemetery—(Doris items.) A darning woman to legislate death out of business.

TRY 'EM BACKWARDS (Bruno, Utah, Register) Alexander Shevita, the local merchant, sold a pair of pants to a one-legged man a few days ago. He sent the pants out to a tailor to have one leg cut off and when they were returned found that the tailor had cut off the wrong leg. The question is, who is to stand the loss, the tailor or the merchant?

The spring-like weather is due to the farmers praying for rain, and the plumbers recommending a hard winter.

Several of the Older Girls have been remodeled, and now have the school-girl complexion, without the school-girl disposition.

PIONEER MOTHER SEES THINGS The pioneer mother was deeply stirred— She blinked at the bare horizon, And nursed her baby, and said, "My word, This certainly is surprisint!"

"A vision appears to my inward eye, My spirit feels plumb buoyant—I reckon I'm goin' to prophesy Like a regular paid clairvoyant!

"On them thar hills by the river bank There'll grow a wonderful city, Where cars will rush and trolleys clank— Oh, Paw, his shore looks pretty!"

"The big 'ol' buildin' 'll touch the clouds, Electric signs 'll beckon, An' folk 'll walk the streets in crowds— A thousand or more, I reckon!"

No Cause for Alarm

IN the columns of many newspapers, we note indications of surprise and alarm, over growing opposition to the administration's New Plan. There should certainly be no surprise. There is no PERFECT recovery plan, anymore than there is a perfect tax—or a perfect anything else. There was bound to be opposition to the New Plan, for every phase of that plan, involves some sacrifice, and few people are willing to sacrifice without protest. As the program developed, and the original enthusiasm declined, growing opposition was inevitable.

NOR do we believe that alarm is justified. We are quite sure neither President Roosevelt nor his official family, are surprised or alarmed at the present situation. They knew the honeymoon couldn't last. They realized that putting through what is in reality a "peaceful industrial and economic revolution" would be no Sunday school picnic. They knew their program couldn't be put into effect without a fight. And they are undoubtedly prepared to make that fight. And a fight it will be, just as all things worth attaining in this life must be fought for.

NOT that there will be any attempt to "bull" through the Recovery program, without altering the crossing of a "t" or the dotting of an "i". The entire "set-up" is one of trial and error, and as defects and injustices are revealed, they will be corrected; just as whenever concessions are justified they will be made.

BUT CERTAIN FUNDAMENTAL PRINCIPLES WILL BE STRICTLY ADHERED TO, and for those who refuse to accept such principles, it is going to be just too bad. Many months ago, it was predicted in this column that President Roosevelt's "winter of discontent" was bound to come. We said then that when the day of reckoning arrived, the sheep would be separated from the goats,—those who actually believed in the president and his policies, would go one way, those who merely gave him lip service, ANOTHER. That time has arrived.

The Greatest Good

A DAY doesn't pass that this office doesn't receive some protest against certain provisions of the N.R.A.—usually a form letter from some organization, designed to advance its special interest.

Today, for example, we received a protest from the "independent oil dealers." It is claimed that the order issued by Secretary Ickes, setting prices below which crude and petroleum products may not be sold, will put them out of business and turn over the oil business to the "iniquitous oil trust."

This order from the Interior department, was issued for one main purpose,—to prevent unrestricted price cutting, destructive competition, in short complete demoralization in one of the country's major industries.

WE believe it is a good idea. It means federal control, but for the protection of an exhaustible national resource, and the stabilization of a great industry, federal control is needed.

No doubt some independent oil interests will be hurt, but the question is what is the greatest good for the greatest number,—what is best for the country as a WHOLE.

THE same fundamental issue runs through all phases of the New Deal. We can't have our cake and eat it. We can't get out of this depression without eliminating the factors which have caused it; and we can't eliminate those factors, without hurting those who have profited by them.

In other words this New Deal is like a major operation. No one likes operations, major or minor. But when a patient is sick unto death, to save the patient's life an operation often MUST be performed. The offending area must be cut out. It's the same with a nation.

Certain things must be cut out if Uncle Sam is to recover, and enjoy normal health again. No one can be said to enjoy the process. But should one oppose it or complain, if only in this way can the life of a nation be saved!

AS for benefitting the so-called oil trust,—no one who knows either President Roosevelt or Secretary Ickes will worry over that score. They are not working for any oil trust, they are merely working to PRESERVE AN INDUSTRY.

That once done the administration can be depended upon to see that the big oil companies get no more than any legitimate honestly-conducted business is entitled to.

They even okeyed the title which suggests that the New Deal is in effect a bloodless revolution.

Some financial experts believe the best way to meet the depreciation in the government bond market is for Mr. Roosevelt to devalue and retire the bonds held by the federal reserve with the treasury gold profits from devaluation.

The state department looked as if a policeman's convention was being held there during Litvinoff's stay. A dozen secret service men and metropolitan detectives accompanied the Russian on his visit to State Secretary Hull. It must have seemed strange to them because they have spent most of their careers chasing communists. A was remarked that all that was needed to complete the picture was for Andy Mellon to lead an anti-communist demonstration up to the department through the streets.

Evangelist Draws Large Attendance At First Baptist

The evangelistic meetings were well attended at the First Baptist church both Sunday morning and evening.

Dr. C. W. Cutler of the Home Mission society, being the speaker. He preached a sermon of encouragement in these times of depression. "For unto you who fear my name shall the Son of Righteousness arise with healing in his wings."

In the evening the message was one of preparation for the children of God. Special music was enjoyed at both services.

The ladies' quartet sang in the morning. The chorus choir gave an anthem in the evening.

Services are being held every evening except Saturday.

APPLE DIET FOR INTESTINAL TROUBLE.

As a health teacher I deserve great credit for rarely if ever insisting that anyone should take spinach, mashed potato, castor oil or an apple.

Perhaps I should omit apple. Apples are pretty sometimes and I don't believe they do any harm if anyone should happen to like 'em to eat. But I'll tell the world that here is one doctor you can keep away or drive away with any kind of apples, unless the cookies you serve with 'em are capital.

Apple pie, that's different, especially if you serve a schooner of foaming raw milk with it, fresh from the cow, or at any rate raw—none of your parboiled or pasteurized stuff, if you please.

Physicians in Germany have recently discovered or rediscovered that apple-juice is a fine remedy for intestinal disorders in infants and in adults. Raw applejuice, it must be said. The grated pulp of ripe, peeled, raw apples.

For the young nursing infant, if fresh apples are not available, Dr. Elizabeth Urbanitzky has found a pure apple powder satisfactory. This is prepared much as banana powder and milk powder is made in this country, by the vacuum drying process, and it keeps through the winter. She gave this to the younger infants as an addition to the bottle, by putting a tablespoonful in the bottle morning and afternoon, or a teaspoonful in each bottle of food prepared for the baby.

Raw apple appears to be beneficial in acute and chronic nutritional disturbances, intestinal infections and intoxications. The apple powder had to be given only for two or three days to show its beneficial effects.

Apple diet is equally beneficial in alimentary troubles in adults. It has proved remarkably corrective in many cases of diarrhea, acute gastro-enteritis and acute enteritis, dysentery and even paratyphoid. It promptly arrests the diarrhea and restores normal condition.

For adults the grated pulp of ripe, peeled raw apples is used. It satisfies both hunger and thirst in these cases. Patients take from one to three pounds of apple in this form daily. In some cases nothing but apple is given for one, two or three days, and after that a day or two of restricted, diet, causally adding one item at a time, and so gradual return to ordinary diet. In other cases the apple is included with a moderately restricted diet.

Frankly, I've never trusted apple sauce since grandma served some with lumps in it.

On the other hand, I have nothing against apples. If I could have it hyperdramatically I'd just as soon take an apple a day. Some doctors are tiresome company anyway.

With this acknowledgment of the remedial value of raw apple, we take pleasure in calling attention to the rapid strides medicine is making these days. When you and I were young, Maggie, raw apple that wasn't darn close to rotten was universally regarded as well nigh sure death from cholera morbus, a dread bugie that never happened but probably tempered many a raid on the apple orchard.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS No Morbid Suggestion Kindly send instructions for treatment of (whatever) . . . Approximately how long does it take to cure it? Do you consider (a technical) test a dependable test for (some other ailment) . . . G. B. Z.

Answer—If you say you have the ailment and ask for my advice, I'll be glad to give you any information or advice I may have. This is not a blooming long-distance clinic nor a quick doctor shop, so do not ask me to give out morbid information indiscriminately.

Baby Bowlegged Our 17-months old is quite bowlegged. Two doctors said she would outgrow it. Isn't it time we did something to correct it? (Mrs. B. E.) Answer—I assume you have already given her a cod liver oil ration, sun-baths, and plenty of outdoor exercise, such as pushing a pushmover. If you believe her legs are not straightening under such management, perhaps suitable splints, applied and worn under your physician's care, would help.

Liver Is Lifer Before moving here from another state I always bought and liked beef liver. But in this village the meat markets have only hog liver and the butcher laughs at me when I ask for beef liver, which he says is not as good as pork liver . . . (Mrs. S. H.) Answer—Beef or calf liver is generally deemed the choicest. Pig liver, however, is all right if one likes it. The finest liverwurst I have ever eaten was made from hog liver.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—Diary of a modern Peppas: Rose and a whimsy from Chic Sale. Through town and crossing 42nd at the library a wild-eyed ram-stom motorist actually moped my shoes. Breakfasting at a public eat near Ben Smith, the Wall Street trader, who looked like Tom White of the magazines.

Then back to turn out my essay, arrange some books and with my wife to Dobbs Ferry to a surprise for Kitty Melph. Ernest Trux's son Phillip scored in a Broadway play. . . . Rags Cobb collects passport pictures of her friends . . . Louis Bromfield came back from his self exile in France an expert tangout. . . . Bull fighters in Spain are giving the run-around to Ernest Hemingway, who glorified them.

The biggest personal draw among the musical comedy players at the moment is the cliff climber Webb. A poppy fellow with an untanned nose and thin swart of mustache, but a flair for weaving evening clothes as no one else does, he has the what-it-takes that packs them in. The most popular of the feather-footed gentry since Castle.

Jeff Machamer tells of the speaking regular downing his 4 p. m. eyepopper gloomily and assailing the bartender with a barrage of invective. When he finally groused a bit, the barkeep mused: "He must have got up on the wrong side of the floor today." (Copyright, 1933, McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

In the next block and near Franklin Roosevelt's house was a space in the center of which was a small cat. It was black, with eyes not long open to the world and expressing the milky blueness of extreme infancy. Although ruffled, he looked as innocent as a reporter from a school of Journalism. Facing him was an experienced Alrode. As the dog went down the house, he became a spilling ball of arched fur. The dog backed suddenly away with a "dorry-Int"-intruded" air. A victory for heredity!

Comment on the Day's News

By FRANK JENKINS

SATURDAY was Armistice Day. Remember, please, that Armistice Day celebrates the END of a war—not the beginning of one. That is as it should be.

THE world war ended on November 11, 1918. Now, 15 years later, we know it should never have begun. We know particularly that we should never have got into it. We fought somebody else's battles, and all we got out of it was ingratitude.

If we had stayed out, we should have been far better off.

BUT that doesn't alter the fact that the Americans who went to war had the courage to fight, and, if necessary, DIE, for a cause that they BELIEVED to be right.

That is something tremendously important. If Americans ever reach the point where they lack the courage to fight and die for what they believe to be right, this nation will have reached the point of decadence.

PEOPLE die, whether they fight or not. A few, relatively speaking, die by violence, with their "boots on." Vastly more die as a result of disease.

Cancer is one of the most dreaded of diseases, and its ravages, apparently, are increasing.

FOR example: In 1920, cancer took a toll of 83 of one year from the average length of life of white men. It now takes a toll of 1.12 years from the average length of life of white men.

IN 1920, cancer took a toll of one and one-half years from the average length of life of white women. It now takes a toll of 1.79 years from the average length of life of white women's lives.

Women, you see, are in greater danger from cancer than men.

IN spite of all scientific progress we have made in the past couple of generations, the cause of cancer is still unknown.

That is a ringing challenge to our intelligence, isn't it? In spite of all we have learned, we still have a LOT MORE to learn.

If we could find the cause of cancer, we might be able to find the cure for it.

BUT let's get back to the subject of fighting, which is of particular interest on Armistice Day.

TOO much fighting, from 1914 to 1918, caused untold suffering and loss to the world. The present depression, which to us of today is the biggest thing in the world, was caused largely by the war.

First because of the war and second because of the depression, which owes its cause to the war, the average level of human welfare has slid FAR DOWN.

HERE in Oregon, we have been fighting for years over higher education, and apparently getting a lot of fun out of it. At least, we go on fighting.

Listen: In 1928 and 1929, the attendance at the University of Oregon and Oregon State college, combined, was 7118. It is NOW 4067.

No such decline in university attendance has occurred in our neighboring states of Washington and California.

WHAT has happened? Well, it is fairly obvious that Oregon parents, instead of sending their children to their own institutions of higher learning during these years of fighting, bleeding and dying, have been sending them to college in other states.

Isn't it about time to quit fighting over higher education in Oregon—even if it is a lot of fun? Fun that costs too much isn't a wise investment.

Good for Non-Residents. To the Editor: In the Tribune of November 9, you show what the sales tax of California has done for P. C. Bigham, a resident of Medford, Oregon, in reducing his taxes over 40 per cent on property in California that he owns.

This is very nice for non-resident owners who have none of the California sales tax to pay, and if Oregon had a sales tax it would be equally beneficial to the thousands of non-resident land owners of Oregon lands, and more of Oregon's timber lands are owned by non-residents than by residents.

Will Mr. Barnes tell us who it was that had to pay 40 per cent of Mr. Bigham's taxes? E. T. MERRILL, Medford, November 13. Prefers Income Tax. To the Editor: I noticed in last Sunday's paper

HUNTING RONTO

By Raymond Wallace Thorberg

When the shades are deep and long behind the Siakiyou, And the winds come yowlin' up the crags— A long-tailed rabbit come a-huntin' an' his side-jaw full of moss; He's out for yaller cougars to fill his huntin' bags.

He comes growlin' 'round the mountain Like a boilin' water fountain— And cusses every time he bumps his toe on snag.

He sees a cougar sneakin' from behind a dead oak tree; He's a horrible sight to see! And does the big cat shiver when that animal draws nigh!

Then with extension tail— And hind legs goin' like flairs— He lariats and kicks that cat into sweet bye and bye.

He starts to tow the cougar up and through the Pass; A-pullin' hard and wheezin at each jerk.

But goes up a steep grade he spins on slippery grass— And for a moment then his engine goes berserk!

Then he fingers out by skill That cougar up the hill— And gallops home with supper to where little rabbits lurk!

REPORT PROGRESS FOREST ROAD JOBS

Road work being carried on under the NRA provisions through the Rogue River national forest, is progressing rapidly, according to reports this morning by Assistant Supervisor Karl L. Janouch.

One crew of 50 men is now employed on the Umpqua divide road, where work is advancing rapidly, and 50 men are also working on the Ashland Mountain road.

In the hazard reduction work, a crew of 25 men is working on the land bordering Klamath lake. Because of the location of the work, these men were selected from Klamath county, Mr. Janouch said. Two small crews of about 10 men each are in the district above Prospect at the present time.

All selections for this work are made through the Jackson county relief committee, he said.
