BIRTHS

CATTLE AUCTION WILL BE OPENED ON MIDWAY ROAD

Under the auction system, buying and selling will be concentrated, with competitive bids made at one location. Stock buyers from Sacramento and Stockton, Cal., have already expressed their desire to patronize such a market. Mr. Dudley said today, and he expects to draw considerable business from northern California. Several owners of fat hogs, ready to go on the market, he added, have also come to him with the complaint that they are unable to move them, since the local market is supplied. Through the auction, he explained, these producers will be granted access to larger terminals, where the stock can be handled.

Sale Each Saturday. Stock will be sold at the auction every Saturday afternoon, beginning at 1 o'clock. When the system gets underway other days will probably see the pavilion opened to the sale of additional produce. Saturday, however, Mr. Dudley said, will always be livestock day. In Nebraska, sales through the auction mounted to carload lots, 800 head of stock often changing hands in a day. A similar turnover, of course, is not anticipated here in the near future, but Mr. Dudley plans to start a growing project when the pavilion opens, November 25.

He is accompanied to Medford by his wife and two children, who are making their home on the Midway road.

Thrilling Picture Coming To Rialto

A midshipman who spent four years at the United States naval academy at Annapolis and now trying to imbue incoming plebes with the spirit of the academy which he himself had never quite acquired, is the paradoxical situation of Bruce Cabot in "Midshipman Jack," coming to the Rialto theater tomorrow.

Sunday Arraigned—S. S. Sunday, arrested recently by state police, was arraigned in justice court today, and a preliminary hearing has been set for 10 a. m. Saturday. Sunday is charged with forgery, allegedly having stolen a check and forging the endorsement.
