

TITLE TILT HERE ON TURKEY DAY IS WHAT TIGERS WANT

Not So Anxious to Make Long Trip to Portland if Could Be Assured Game That Would Aid Funds

No selection of an upstate high school team to play in the Shrine benefit game at Portland, Thanksgiving day will be made until after the week-end games, when Corvallis plays Salem Friday, Medford plays Ashland Saturday, and Washington and Roosevelt schools of Portland meet Friday. Bend has no week-end game.

Salem, Bend and Medford are rated as the three contenders. The selection will be made by the sport editors of Portland papers.

Want Game Here.

Principal C. G. Smith and Coach Darwin K. Burgher of the local school said yesterday they were not particularly anxious to play in Portland if they could be assured of a Thanksgiving game here that would have a state championship complexion. They hold the Portland game cannot be regarded as a title match, as all the Portland teams have been tied, as have Salem and Bend. No definite decision will be made locally until the end of the week.

Salem and Bend are both active contenders for the honor. Medford has made no formal bid, but bobbed up yesterday as the only undefeated and undefeated high school football team in the state. Bend and Salem played a 13-13 tie early in the season.

Medford More Expensive.

From a Shrine financial standpoint, Salem is the logical choice. They could be hauled into Portland by bus on the morning of the contest, at a minimum cost. With Medford, the expense would run from $500 to $750, with train fares for 25 players, lodgings and three or four meals, and chaperones, managers and assistants. The same applies to Bend.

At a meeting of the Portland school principals, Medford was given consideration for its season's record. The Burghermeisters practically clinched the southern Oregon title last Saturday by defeating Grants Pass, 40 to 0.

Bend is not after the Portland appearance, and so is Salem. Bend points to its 30 to 0 defeat of Klamath Falls, against Medford's 7 to 0 win over the Pelicans, as an argument in their favor.

Conditions Different.

Nothing matters in Klamath Falls but defeat of Medford. Every season they point for the Tigers, as they have never defeated a Medford grid squad. It is their big game. Medford played them on a muddy field, in the rain. Bend played them on a clear day, on their own field. The Tigers were only looking for victory, and Bend was aiming at the highest possible score. Bend's brightest game is the defeat of The Dalles, 27 to 0. The Dalles filed early application for title contention, and the Bend loss knocked their hopes for a goal.

Salem claims the Bend tie with them was more or less of a fluke, and there is some question of the legality of the play that tied the score.

There is no question, throughout the state, that Medford has the best record and is the strongest team of the three mentioned.

Klamath Backs Tigers.

Klamath Falls is backing the Tigers for the Portland game, and the Klamath Falls Herald, in its Monday issue declared, "Medford can't possibly be overlooked as a title contender," and "is more deserving of consideration than either Bend or Salem."

Boost for Burgher.

Speaking of the record of Coach Burgher, the article said: "Burgher has the finest record of any coach in Oregon since the days Prink Gillison coached at Medford. He has been at Medford four seasons and has lost but four games. One of these games was for the state championship against Jefferson high school at Portland last year.

He has a strong team and a steady one—a people in Klamath Falls have cause to know—and both sentiment and fact should prompt southern Oregon to support Medford's candidacy for the championship game if the Tigers win from Grants Pass and Ashland."

To Show Pictures—Moving pictures of Alaska will be shown this evening at 7:30 o'clock in the Phoenix Presbyterian church, according to announcement this morning. An offering will be taken, but no admission charged. The pictures are sent out by the board of national missions of the Presbyterian church, and concern the work of the organization in Alaska.

GOLFERS DISCOVER TOURNEY ALL OVER WHEN THEY FINISH

"How many strokes at the battle of the oaks"—many a golfer was asking yesterday, but not one member of that army of valiant men, carrying on the combat from early morn to sunset Sunday, could answer. Nor could a reply be obtained from the rear guard, when the warriors finally reported at the club house.

The turkeys had been given away, the winners of low gross and low net scores had been announced but the grand army seemed oblivious to all that—the nine holes had been played in spite of grave hazards at the battle of the oaks. Casualties included two broken clubs, nine lost balls, and a disposition or three, prior to the last round.

The oaks, located on the fifth green had received all balls, when the army progressed to that point under the leadership of Major Morris. Mark Miller, mess sergeant for the company, was exhausted when the destination was reached and the sturdy oaks proved too much for him at the first stroke, destroying his splendid "hole in one" record of the past.

Lieut. George Codding, irritated by the private crowding his heels, swung into the game with a combination of military prowess and legal skill, but the result was the same. Ralph Stephenson, Dr. A. F. W. Kresse, Gordon Green and Frank Truitt then tried, but nature was "agin them" also.

When the sun descended on the Rogue Valley course, the stragglers of seven men had "crossed the Delaware," and the other four holes were played with an exchange of clubs and loan of balls.

44-LB. CHINOOK HOOKED BY GIRL

GRANTS PASS, Nov. 21.—(Sp.)—Crowds of envious piscatorial enthusiasts were gathered before Joe Wharton's shop window Monday to gaze at the 44 pounds of fighting chinook displayed there. The fish was hooked by the 12-year-old daughter of Hiram Hight of Castle Rock camp at the mouth of Smith river. Little Gladys Hight played her catch for an hour before she could coax it in to shore, spectators reported.

An even larger chinook salmon was brought back to Grants Pass from Smith river by Charles Adair, who caught two, weighing 46 pounds and 38 pounds. Adair modestly calls them minnows. They were caught on a steelhead rod. Captain Pierce of Camp Kerby at Selma, who accompanied him, was unsuccessful.

Other local fishermen who succeeded in bringing home Monday lunches were C. A. Winetrot, Charles Hansen and Alvin Wallace, who caught six fish.

Jack Havilide and Nat Boss returned to San Francisco Sunday after spending a few days in Grants Pass fishing. They hooked eight steelheads and landed four. Pat Gallagher from Speed's Place reported Monday that the fish are taking the fly, spinner and bait.

With the change in the weather, fishing conditions here are expected to improve rapidly, Joe Wharton said, as the run will move up the river.

Dorcy Dutton, 157, Salt Lake City, took two falls out of three to win the preliminary from "Totem Pole" Anderson, 160, Fort Lewis.

CUBS AND IRISH IN SCORELESS TIE

In a hard fought gridiron battle, the Medford high school Tiger Cubs played another tie game with the Gaels of St. Mary's on the senior high school football field last night, the final score being 0 to 0.

The Cubs' eleven made strong rallies toward the Irish goal line, but couldn't find an opening for the winning touchdown. Lewis and Gebhardt of the Cubs gave the Gaels plenty of worries before the game was over.

D. Lewis and G. Smith opened up in the last three minutes of play and game the Cubs' followers hair raising thrills with their patient passing attack and wide end runs. They succeeded in getting within scoring distance numerous times, but couldn't push it over.

With the playing of this game, the Tiger Cubs finished their season. They have won three games, tied two and have been defeated once.

NO PROPAGANDA IS PROMISE OF RUSSIAN ENVOY

New Ambassador Amused by Query of American Press—Declares Country Can't Import Communism

By STANLEY P. RICHARDSON (Associated Press Staff Writer). MOSCOW, Nov. 21.—(AP)—Alexander Antonovitch Troyanovsky, new Russian ambassador to the United States, said today that no communist propaganda will emanate from the soviet embassy in Washington.

His statement was made in response to a question asked in an American press conference. He exhibited a bit of amusement at the query, and replied: "Can't Import Communism. Communism is not a thing that can be imported to one country by another. It is not a question of foreign relationship, but a domestic problem. In any event, I can assure you gentlemen there will be no communist activity on the part of any of our officials in America."

On the wall was a large map intersected with red and blue lines, charting the plans for foreign trade and transport of the second five-year plan—the two subjects with which Troyanovsky deals mainly as vice-chairman of the planning commission.

Engaging Personality. The new ambassador is a man of engaging personality, whose general manner of quiet dignity often is broken by an infectious, cordial laugh.

A man of slightly less than average height, his swarthy complexion gives him features a suggestion of oriental appearance, accentuated by bushy black eyebrows and thinning black hair, grey at the temples. His mustache is small and closely clipped. He wears well-cut clothes of obviously foreign make.

Troyanovsky confessed a weakness for contract bridge, chess and tennis, but he has never tried to play golf. He does not like poker. He never smokes.

Leaving Soon. He said he expects to leave for Washington in a few weeks, but that he will see Maxim Litvinoff, commissar for foreign affairs, who is now in Washington, before he goes.

"My job," said Troyanovsky, "will be to continue the work Mr. Litvinoff started, trying to promote mutual understanding and friendship and to develop economical and cultural relations between the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and the United States of America."

"Naturally, the question of trade is one of the most important before us, and I hope our economic contact with America now will be much larger than ever before."

LABORITE INSULTS BRITISH KING ON PARLIAMENT VISIT

Following custom, the royal procession left the house of lords and then the commoners trooped back through the long corridor to their chamber.

After his outburst about cuts of unemployment pay, McGovern followed with a growling protest about the magnificent scene of riches and splendor around him.

"It's a shame—all this, while people are starving," he said, and after that came another embittered murmur: "Living on wealth created by the people."

Except for the few moments during and immediately after McGovern's outburst, the parliamentary opening was not disturbed.

Their majesties re-entered the golden royal coach and the royal procession returned through troop-lined streets to the palace.

"I certainly have no regret for what I did," McGovern told a representative of the Associated Press in the lobby.

"I was so filled with indignation at the sight of all this colossal wealth that I could not stand it any longer and I simply had to express my thoughts."

When J. McGovern, labor party member from Glasgow, rose in the house of lords and shouted "How about the Means test?" he was referring to the government test required before unemployed persons can receive a dole.

The Means test provides that no one can receive a dole unless he proves he has no other means of subsistence except by such government relief. The labor party, for some time
