

DIRE DANGER FROM HEAVY INFLATION SEEN BY SAVANTS

Roosevelt's Monetary Policy Moving Toward Alarming Proportions Says Group of Swarthmore Professors

SWARTHMORE, Pa., Dec. 1.—(AP)—With a warning that President Roosevelt's monetary policy is moving toward deflation of "alarming proportions," eleven social science professors of Swarthmore college urge immediate return to the gold standard, "although not necessarily with a dollar of the former gold content."

In a statement which they asserted was not "issued on behalf of Wall Street, but on behalf of the small income receivers," the professors said the present monetary policy of the national administration will discredit its other programs.

Believe in Some Policies
"We believe in many of the policies of the government, both economic and non-economic," the statement said. "We approve of many of the ends sought by advocates of the monetary policy. We recognize that there are many degrees of 'inflation' and that as yet the government may be said to have inflated to a relatively slight degree."

"But we are convinced that the government is moving rapidly in the direction of an inflation of alarming proportions. This statement can only suggest the basis of our protest."

"The chief danger of present developments, however, is that they point toward too much spending of a highly dangerous sort."

No Use to Have
"People who get a dollar may come to feel they must spend it immediately, for fear it will be worth less tomorrow. Government borrowing from the banks for the sake of public expenditures or for the sake of temporarily financing private groups may become so large as to impair federal credit and commercial bank safety for the future."

The sponsors of the statement are Professors Herbert F. Praser, Clair Wilcox and Patrick Murphy, of the department of economics; J. Ronald Pennock, Frances L. Reinhold and Harold E. B. Speight, department of political science; Troyer S. Anderson, department of history; Brand Blanchard, John W. Bacon and Frances Blanchard, department of philosophy; and Robert B. MacLeod, department of psychology.

Explaining they felt their own interest is at stake because "teachers' incomes are relatively small," the group asserted economic adjustments can be effected by "reducing private debt burdens by encouraging the direct scaling-down process already in motion; aiding the farmer by checking the rise of industrial prices under NRA codes, etc."

They Say the Goblins Will Get You If You Drink Stale Coffee

OVER THE RADIO—in the magazines—on the billboards, millions are being spent to warn you against stale coffee.

You are told that coffee is unfit for use unless fresh—that stale coffee will keep you awake, upset your digestion—in fact, almost any kind of disaster may result.

If true, why take chances even though this or that new-fangled dohicky is supposed to keep old ground coffee fresh.

Play safe. Buy really fresh coffee. Buy Z-MOR-U—roasted today, here tomorrow and ground the day you buy it.

If what the bigger coffee firms say is true, Z-MOR-U is safest, and best for it's the finest coffee money can buy—fresh with its full flavor and aroma.
