HEROIC MOTHER SAVES THREE CHILDREN FROM WOLVES ON ICY SHORE

KETCHIKAN, Alaska, Dec. 5.—(AP)—The story of a mother's heroic battle to save her three little children from ravenous wolves and death by exposure during a wild northern storm, was revealed today with rescue of a party wrecked on an isolated reef.

Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Cameron, their children, ranging in age from 17 to nine years, and a companion, John Volchek, were rescued after their boat crashed on a reef Thanksgiving day, leaving the party without food or shelter.

Placing the mother and children on the reef, huddled over their fire, Cameron, while Volchek refueled the boat, but a fouled propeller and angry winds carried the craft away and it sank. The mother, believing the two men drowned, found the incoming tide threatened to extinguish the fire. She carried the burning embers in her hands above tidewater, saving the fire, their only means of protection against wolves and the elements.

Meanwhile Cameron and Volchek struggled to the ranch of a farmer who summoned a forest service vessel which rescued Mrs. Cameron and Mayor Roberto Uria. The couple will leave Magdalena Bay, Mexico, to return to their home in Harborsburg, Penn., where his father attended a government convention, Oct. 30. After Governor Olcott brought the squirrels to Salem many people protested they would become a nuisance.

Dr. R. E. Lee Steiner, superintendent of the state hospital for the insane, stated at one time imported the squirrels to the hospital grounds. Some were evidently overlooked, or perhaps returned. Now they are plentiful at both the hospital and state-house grounds.

Spokane, Wash., Dec. 5.—(AP)—Creation of a publicly owned system to distribute electric power from the Grand Coulee plant in competition with private companies was advocated here today by Homer T. Bone, Washington's junior senator.

Any public power development project, the senator said in an interview, "should have the right to establish a complete transmission and distribution system. The public development should have the same right to sell electric energy to consumers as a private company."

"I am opposed to giving any private company a monopoly of the power distributing business. When a private company is given such power, it is in a position to run the affairs of the state."
