HUNGRY WORM IS CLUE TO MISSING ANCIENT VOLUMES

CARMEL, Cal., (UP)—An insignificant worm furnished the key to the recovery of many missing volumes brought here by Father Junipero Serra and his fellow "padres" of the mission period of early California life. The Very Rev. James Culliton, D. D., revealed today. The famed Serra brought a few well-worn tomes when he came to found the Carmel Mission. These were the nucleus of California's first library. Other volumes came from the Old World by way of Mexico City. Time and the confusion that followed the secularization of the missions scattered or lost the old volumes, some of which dated back centuries.

Father Culliton, chancellor of the Monterey-Pasadena diocese, and Father Michael O'Connell, rector at Carmel, searching through old records and tomes, came across the worm. They described it as "a worm of the book variety peculiar to the region, which had come to life in the center of an old volume and had traveled in a straight line, cutting through half the book in which he was hatched and through three others beside it on the ancient shelf."

The larvae of the worm contained ash, which showed where his life had ended as he began to bore through the second cover of the old book. "Strange to say," said Father Culliton, "these four books, though not of one set, were numbered consecutively, showing that the worm did his work in the library which catalogued them." Catalogue marks on 53 volumes had been considered those of the San Fernando library of Mexico. But the worm upset this notion and showed that the marks had been made by Father Serra or one of his immediate successors.

"The little insect also proved that he had done his work in the Carmel library. The padres were in the habit of using as bookmarks any scrap of paper that might be lying about the study table. One of these scraps was dated 1836, another 1839. Through that dated 1839 the worm had gone while through the other there was no hole. This meant that between these years, and therefore, long after the books had ceased to come from San Fernando, the books were in order on the Carmel Mission shelves. "Once it was sure that the marks designated books of Carmel's first library it was easy to know the approximate number of volumes in the oldest section of the collection, to recognize tomes that had strayed and recover some of the missing treasures. "Sixty-seven of the books were recovered in Santa Cruz. Eight were located in Mission San Juan Bautista. A private library yielded 177 volumes. One convent yielded six and another five. Two were found in Hollister. Four hundred and fifty-eight have been recovered in all. Six are now in various missions. "The surest key to the restoration of the Carmel and San Carlos Missions library is the particular type of book worm which thrives in the Monterey area alone. The names and catalogue of the missing volumes are now known, but there is little likelihood that all will be recovered."

VANCOUVER MAY GET WHEAT BIN

PORTLAND, Ore., Dec. 8.—(AP)—Rumors, which the Journal said were "well founded," were current among grain and shipping men here today that the Pacific Continental Grain Company of Portland plans to build a 2,000,000-bushel grain elevator at Vancouver, Wash., where it will have direct rail connections with the Spokane, Portland & Seattle railroad's main line to the Inland Empire country. The Journal said Henry W. Collins, president of the Pacific Continental Grain company, would neither confirm nor deny the report that Vancouver had been selected, but he did say "negotiations are under way but no deal has been closed."
