Spencer Tracy At Craterian

Loretta Young and Spencer Tracy in "Man's Castle" A Columbia Picture

Loretta Young and Spencer Tracy have the leading roles in "Man's Castle," starting their four-day engagement at the Craterian theater today.

"Man's Castle" is Director Frank Borzage's greatest romance since his memorable "7th Heaven" first flashed across the cinema heaven. And, like the former picture, this latest romantic drama is built around the love of a young fellow and a girl, both searching for the always unreachably delightful of complete happiness with one another. Tracy plays the role of "Bill," gruff, kind, and altogether charming. Loretta Young is "Trina," a helpless young girl he meets and takes under his wing to protect. Their eventual love forms the basis of the story.

Others in the cast include Glenda Farrell, Walter Connolly, Marjorie Rambeau, Arthur Hohl and Dickie Moore.

There are also a well selected group of short subjects on the same program.

Dorothea Wick Heads Bill Now On Holly Screen

Dorothea Wick, who gave so brilliant a performance in "Maedchen in Uniform," is now heading a fine double bill at the Holly theater in her first American starring appearance. She has the principal role in "Cradle Song," a moving story of frustrated mother love behind convent walls.

Miss Wick is the newest Continental star to come to Hollywood to take her place beside such performers as Marlene Dietrich and Greta Garbo.

She was signed by Paramount to fill the role of Joanna in "Cradle Song," a part of foian in spirit to the one she played in her Continental film. As in "Maedchen in Uniform," she lavishes her love and affection upon a young girl.

In the story, Joanna enters a convent at the age of 18. Her natural desire for motherhood is gratified when a baby is left at the convent door, and she is permitted to raise it. The child, Teresa, grows to maidenhood in the convent under the care of 30 "mothers." At 18 Teresa falls in love and determines to leave the convent. The struggle on her part between her love for Joanna and her sweetheart, plus the struggle of Joanna and the sisters, who do not know whether to attempt to

'FRISCO JENNY' ON NEW STUDIO POLICY

A dive in the picture area and glamorous Barbary Coast of San Francisco during the earthquake, is the setting for Ruth Chatterton's starring vehicle, "Frisco Jenny," which opened the new double feature policy at the Studio theater today. The district was the stamping ground of the play boys of the city, of visitors bent on wild orgies, of sailors on shore leave and the riff-raff of the docks.

A reporter creating a story or the sake of a sensational scoop, a prosecutor "playing politics" and a mother greedy for personal publicity doom an innocent boy to the electric chair in "The Past of Mary Holmes," the second feature picture.
