MOLECULE HOLDS KEY TO SOLUTION OF LIFE'S ORIGIN

Science Near Long Sought Goal Is Present Belief—Capacity for Dividing Keeps World Replenished

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
(Associated Press Science Editor.)

COLD SPRING HARBOR, N. Y., Dec. 19.—(AP)—That science is closing in rapidly on the secret of how life is formed from non-living matter is predicted in the annual report of the Carnegie Institution.

A life molecule which apparently holds this secret is described by Dr. C. B. Davenport, director here of the department of genetics of the institution. This molecule is the gene, an ultra-microscopic particle apparently made by the joining of a number of atoms. Genes carry all the characters of heredity in body and in germ cells.

Gene Big Puzzle.

"When we understand the structure of the gene," Dr. Davenport states, "we shall know the essential difference between living and non-living matter.

"The geneticist should shortly be in position to aid the chemist in getting at the ultimate nature of living matter, and especially must both cooperate in the solution of that fundamental property of the living molecule, namely its capacity for dividing indefinitely with retention of all its qualities.

"For upon this property depends all agriculture and animal husbandry—depends all life itself.

Once Lifeless World.

"Before the self-dividing molecule had been evolved, this was a lifeless world; unless it has been evolved in some other planets, they are lifeless still.

"The living, dividing molecule, of which the gene is a special sort, is the great upbuilding agency in a universe that is running down. For the genes create living matter out of the non-living material, while periodically that which they have created is returned to its source for new generations to feed upon."
