Pilot Pictures New Type Plane for Flying Sea

Fuselage To Be Used For Balance Only, Says Expert — Diesel Engine Would Provide Power For Driving.

By HENRY T. RUSSELL

LONDON — (UP) — Monster "wing planes," equipped with Diesel engines which will cross the Atlantic in 20 hours in all weather, are the real solution to the problem of trans-Atlantic flying for which Lindbergh is investigating routes, according to Louis Breguet, French airplane constructor.

Breguet, here on a vacation, said that he had not come here in connection with Lindbergh's trans-Atlantic survey.

"Personally," he said, "I am convinced that the really commercially paying trans-Atlantic flying machine has not been built. For the moment I, for one, have neither the time nor the available capital to invest in the experiments which would be required.

"I visualize the future trans-Atlantic plane as 'flying wings,' a machine of which the body would be for balancing purposes only. The load of the machine would be carried in the wings. These would have to be sufficiently big to accommodate the average man standing up. That would enable passengers to live in the plane quite comfortably.

"The fact that the plane would be equipped with Diesel engines, which by the time the experimental plane is built will have been perfected for use in flying machines, should enable the plane to escape bad weather by climbing far higher than planes equipped with petrol engines can fly."

Breguet's "wing planes" would weigh 100 tons or more (compared with Dornier D.O.X.'s 40 tons). The wing span would be approximately 300 feet. The body would be comparatively short, 120 feet.

"I thought of the idea over 10 years ago and even lectured on it in the United States," he said, "and I still am convinced as ever that therein lies the solution to commercially paying trans-Atlantic flying."

Christian Church at Phoenix Hears Frees Give Bible Lectures

J. M. Frees of Medford has given a number of bible lectures at Phoenix in the Christian church, showing that words of Jesus and not the ten commandments will constitute the standard of the judgment for christians.

This comes as a little shock to many but is by no meanse a new doctrine as it was foretold by God in Deut. 18:10, preached by Peter, Acts 3:22, by Stevens, Acts 7:37, and by Paul in 1 Cor. 9:21; 2 Cor. 3, Heb. 12. John, the beloved disciple, is very clear on this subject, even terming the laws pass over the Sabbath, that God gave Israel as Jewish.

Frees declared the only way to uphold the decalogue, instead of the sayings of Jesus as the new covenant law was to ignore certain passages of scripture and to do this is contrary to the teaching of Christ, which is to live by every word. He further stated that he had never known a friend of Seventh Day to be familiar with a few dozen passages of scripture that are decidedly against that doctrine.

The speaker spent some time in reading from the writings of Mrs. E. G. White, the Adventist, prophetess, in regard to the wholesale condemnation of Sunday keeping churches, how even their prayers are an abomination in the sight of God, that they worship God in vain, teaching for doctrine the commandments of men.

It was brought out that all of this wholesale condemnation was directly traceable to a scissor method of Bible study, as well as a scissor method in studying so-called inspired writings of Mrs. White in regard to diet, dress, jewelry, etc., and the average Adventist not even attempting to live according to her teaching.

Take Recess in Ferry Romance

SAULT STE MARIE, Ont., Dec. 20. —(AP)—The ferryboat romance of John W. Hampshire, an American who cannot enter Canada, and his wife, Mary Ellis Hampshire, a Canadian, who was refused admittance to the United States, ended today, for the time being.

Aboard the international ferry that runs between here and Sault Ste Marie, Mich., the husband and wife said goodbye. For weeks they have met on the boat, unable to land together.

"I guess there is nothing more we can do," Hampshire said. "I'll just have to return to my home in Fort Wayne (Ind.) and try to get a job." His wife will remain here with her parents.

Mrs. Hampshire is barred from the United States because she is a Canadian citizen and served a reformatory sentence. Hampshire is not allowed to enter Canada because he had served a sentence in an Ontario prison and had been deported.

First Lady Pleased at Growth of Child Labor Disapproval

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—(AP)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt today expressed gratification at the child labor amendment having passed the half-way mark with Saturday's ratification by Maine, 19th state.

"I wish very much that the child labor amendment would be pushed," she said. "I have been so afraid that people would think that because a clause against child labor was in the codes they need go no further.

"I look upon the codes as a method of pointing out possibilities to the people. There is a termination point for them. The things that work well must be perpetuated."

Mrs. Roosevelt cited the child labor amendment as a means of permanently keeping boys and girls too young to be at work out of industry. She urged state laws as a means of insuring the minimum wage and shorter hour provisions brought in by the codes.

"The steel and auto industries wanted to renew their codes so they must have proven good," she said.

John Wrisley, Former Rogue Valley Pioneer, Has Paralytic Stroke

John Wrisley, known to a host of Southern Oregon pioneers as "Jack," suffered a stroke of paralysis Tuesday and had not yet regained consciousness today, according to word received by local friends from Newberg, where the Wrisleys now make their home.

Mr. Wrisley, who is now nearing 90 years of age, lived for many years where the Modoc orchard is now located. His father farmed that land during the Indian wars, when the Rogue River tribes were leaving a path of devastation through the valley. The Wrigley farm was not bothered, however. Mr. Wrigley took his family to Phoenix, then known as Gaiberg, for protection during the heighth of the war, then returned to till the soil while the fighting continued. John Wrisley was then a small boy but he remembered the experience and related it and other stirring stories to friends during recent years.

New Air Service Here March 1st

Plans are being made for the extension of the Capital Speed Lines, Inc., now operating between Eastbay and Sacramento, to extend their service to Redding, Klamath Falls and Medford on March 1, according to announcement made here by C. Ray Gilliland, president of the company.

One plane will make the trip north each day, Mr. Gilliland said, and efforts are being made to get express contracts with newspaper and other companies, for delivery in this section.

The Capital Speed Lines, Inc., was formerly known as the Varney Air Lines, and was purchased by Mr. Gilliland from Varney when he went to Romania where he obtained an air mail contract.

Lumber Quotas for Next Year Fixed by NRA

Production Slightly Over Estimated Consumption Allowed by Control Committee—Under Agreement

PORTLAND, Dec. 20.—(AP)—Lumber production in 1934 for the continental United States was set at 5,078,000,000 feet, approximately 1,000,000 feet more than the estimated consumption for the coming year, by the national control committee of the lumber code authority of the NRA, meeting today in the Multnomah hotel.

In making the total the committee authorized the excess production when the lumber operators agreed to take care of unemployment in the industry by the continued operation required for the cut.

The allocations have the full effect the final decision binding the lumber industry, for under the code setup action of the control committee is final. The only amendment to the quota is through appeal to the committee itself.

The alocations have the full effect as though signed by President Roosevelt himself.

Dalai Lama, High Priest of Tibet, Joins Ancestors

LHASA, Tibet, Dec. 20.—(AP)—The Dalai Lama, or supreme religious ruler of Tibet, died Sunday at the age of 60, it was announced today.

He wielded supreme civil and religious power in the country, and thus it was to him that three Englishmen had to apply for permission to fly over Mt. Everest, "home of the gods," last spring.

It was only after the fliers, the Marquis of Clydesdale, Colonel L. V. Stewart Blacker and Flight Lieutenant D. F. McIntyre, had assured the Dalai Lama that they would rise high enough over Everest not to disturb the gods in their dwelling place that his holiness gave permission.

The prevailing religion of Lamaism is a form of Buddhism. The Dalai Lama, selected by priests, is held to be a reincarnation of the divine ancestor of Tibetians.

Lhasa, capital of Tibet, known as the "forbidden city," was closed to foreigners until 1890, because of its political and religious exclusiveness and its inaccessability.

The late Dalai Lama departed from all traditions in 1931 by ordering an automobile. A Chinese chauffeur was engaged to drive the car along accessible sections, but where the road was impassable by motor, bands of coolies carried it.

There is no check on the power of the Dalai Lama, a rule which resembles a pure theocracy. He is known as the "Jewel of Majesty," or the "Sovereign Treasure," but is guided in ordinary usages by custom. The whole land, under the religion, belongs to him. His sect has many followers in Mongolia and in China.
