CLOUDBURST HITS HARD BLOW OVER ENTIRE L. A. AREA

sweep through the area that for a time nearly all traffic was paralyzed and 24 hours after the first roar of mud and rock-laden waters had terrified the victims there was only a semblance of orderly interurban and railroad train movements.

Cloudburst Blamed.
Tracing the course of the disaster, flood control engineers agreed that a cloudburst in the Montrose area precipitated most of the damage and loss of life. Montrose is a community cupped in the foothills about 15 miles due north of Los Angeles, separated from the metropolis by the low-lying Verdugo mountains.

After visiting in Portland and other cities in the north, Mr. and Mrs. Puhl are temporarily located on Willamette street, this city.

Patrols were set up in all districts to prevent sabotage.

In some sections of the Montrose district the highways are covered with 12 feet of debris, here and there an automobile or truck protruding. Telephone, gas, light and water mains were wrecked.

Relief Organized.
While police and sheriff's officials directed a search for victims and sought identification of the bodies recovered, other agencies organized quickly to provide relief for sufferers and repair the damage done.

Legionnaires aided the policing of the districts and helped supply first aid for many sufferers. Some 3,000 CWA workers pledged their aid in bringing order out of chaos and will be taken into the Montrose district this morning to begin the work of clearing highways.

In sections of Venice, beach resort, where 1,500 homes were flooded deeply by the overflow of water carried to the sea in canals, life guards manned rowboats and rescued many of the stranded residents, some of whom were forced to seek shelter on the second floor or in the attics of their homes until aid arrived.

Five Die in Auto.
Five died when their automobile, groping through the gloom, plunged through a bridge washout and was caught like a splinter in the maelstrom of mud and water which had swept away the crossing. Three more automobiles disappeared over another bridge in a similar manner. Several men in them managed to swim to safety, but two women and another man have disappeared. Police expect to uncover their bodies in the accumulation of silt and some may even have been washed as far as the ocean, 30 miles distant from the scene of the accident.

Automobiles were buried up to the hoods and sometimes nearly to the tops in debris and homes fell into washes and gullies.

Streets in all sections were paved by silt to a depth ranging between six inches to two feet. In some areas the avalanche of water still rumbled past today, although the principal danger apparently has passed, the weather bureau predicting unsettled weather today and clearing Wednesday.

Schools Closed.
Schools here and in Glendale, which adjoins the Montrose district, did not open today. Examination of schools here already was underway as a result of the March earthquake, and it was feared the floods may have further weakened some structures.

Sheriff's deputies had retrieved 10 bodies from the wreckage in the Montrose district. Most of the victims were believed to have been in some 25 houses which were destroyed by the flood. Twenty-five other homes were damaged extensively.

WATCH THEIR EYES

The most precious heritage your children receive from life is the faculty of sight. Without good vision, life cannot be lived to the fullest. Nothing can take its place. But children do not realize how precious their eyes are. They do not realize that to strain their eyes by reading or playing in a glaring light or in gloom may seriously impair their vision in later years. You must watch their eyes and guard them from strain. It is a peculiar fact that children invariably pick a poorly lighted part of a room to read or play. This is a danger that can only be eliminated by having good lighting throughout the room.

their book too close to their eyes, lose no time in finding out and correcting the cause of their eyestrain. In a bulletin on child welfare, the statement is made that, "many a child groping with poor eyes and struggling for an education against this handicap, becomes not only a stupid child, but a rebellious child." Where the light is poor the child is sure to strain his eyes. This may result in impaired vision in later years that will prove to be a handicap throughout life. Many dealers, as well as this company, are selling a new indirect type of home lighting fixture that provides CORRECT lighting with a minimum of expense. Look to your lighting if you would keep the priceless treasure of good eyesight.

LIQUOR CONTROL NOT UP TONIGHT

The question of liquor control in Medford will not be brought up at tonight's meeting of the city council, Mayor E. M. Wilson stated today, contrary to belief about the town. No further action will be taken by the city regarding regulation of liquor sales, until after the meeting here Thursday of the League of Oregon Cities. A program for all cities of the state, it is understood, will be worked out at that meeting. An ordinance, recommended for the League was forwarded to Medford last week. It has not been adopted here, however, all action having been delayed pending the developments of the Thursday meeting.
