PORTLAND BUTTER PRICES SLIDE OFF ABNORMAL LEVEL

PORTLAND, Jan. 3.—(AP)—Butter prices dropped 1 to 1 1/2c during the late session of the produce exchange. This action was expected and in fact overdue as there appeared no reason for maintenance of the previously advanced quotation aside from manipulative purposes.

Increased make of butter has been shown locally for a week or so therefore prices were held at the high point as a stop to speculators.

Butterfat was down 1c lb. in line with butter declines.

Trading in the egg market was increasing here with more fresh stock available and continued decrease in offerings out of store.

There remained a good demand for dressed turkeys in the local trade with arrivals of limited volume. Sales to retailers were generally 17c for toms and 18c for hens of top quality with the buying price 1c below this.

Demand for live chickens was generally good although here and there some eagerness was reflected for medium and light weight hens. All other sorts were firmly priced for the day.

Market for country killed calves showed strength here with prices up another notch. Hogs were about holding their own as a result of late cuts in livestock. Lambs were firm with a higher price quoted.

Hide market was showing strength although green hides were down a fraction on account of the low beef trade. Calves and kips were firm to higher. Sheep pelts were also firm to higher.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—(P)—After pursuing a dull and featureless course most of the session, stocks were subjected to a brief selling flurry in the last hour today. Losses of 1 to around 3 points were soon reduced, however, and the ticker tape once more turned to idling. The close was easy. Transfers approximated 1,300,000 shares.

Clever Comedy on Rialto Bill

Supposing you were the butler of an Austrian prince, and were entertaining a lady in your master's luxurious apartment during his absence, only to have him suddenly walk in on you, hearing champagne for your entertainment and wearing the servant's coat which you had previously removed in favor of the prince's smoking jacket? That's what happens to Paul Lukas

ANNUAL MEET AT CHRISTIAN CHURCH

A large number gathered at the First Christian church Monday evening for the annual meeting of the church, which opened with a covered dish supper at 6:30 o'clock.

The meeting was conducted in the church auditorium with a lively song service led by the pastor, W. R. Baird, followed by reports from the various departments.

The Bible school showed an average attendance of 449 for each Sunday throughout the year, and the pastor's report stated there had been 139 additions to the church membership during 1933. Worthwhile reports were given by all departments and officers were elected for the coming year.

The program for the evening included a vocal solo by Joyce Sims, a violin solo by John Baird, a vocal solo by Effie Herbert Yeoman and a vocal duet by L. G. Gentner and M. E. Olson.

Here Thursday

More love tangles than have ever been seen in one picture before will be unfolded on the screen of the Craterian theater when "Convention City" will open tomorrow. The many love affairs are said to lead to the maddest, merriest situations imaginable.

The plot of the story is unique and novel, centering about the riotous happenings at the annual sales jamboree at Atlantic City, and painting the conventionalists as neglecting business meetings in order to turn playboys.

A couple of wives who drop in unexpectedly on the carousals add to the hilarious entanglements. Joan Blondell, as the gold digging, blonde-haired vamp, causes most of the troubles with her roving eyes and her siren smile. Men attending the convention fall for her by the carload with disastrous results to their bankrolls.

A strong all-star cast includes, besides Miss Blondell, Adolphe Menjou, Dick Powell, Mary Astor, Guy Kibbee and Frank McHugh.
