Clever Craterian Comedy Coming

The traveling salesmen start to travel—out the window—when a wife comes onto the scene in "Convention City." The cast includes such favorites as Guy Kibbee, Adolphe Menjou, Joan Blondell, Mary Astor, Dick Powell, Frank McHugh and many others.

of stars at the Holly theater this week (Saturday).

Estelle Pratus of Australia, former star of Earl Carroll's Vanities, singer and dancer.

Edith Rogers of Seattle, former Cornish school violinist and musical comedy star of Broadway, who sings and dances and impersonates Jean Harlow and Mae West. And like Mae West she's not married.

The Marsh Sisters, sensational acrobatic dancers.

Williams and Walker, sons of the famous old dancing team of the same name, who come direct from Harlem's hottest spot, "Connie's Inn."

Henry Santrey's band runs the gamut of class and his 30 entertainers keep the audiences entertained.

"Eight Girls in a Boat" is the Holly's screen attraction on the same bill.

ANN HARDING IN 'DOUBLE HARNESS'

Married couples who assert they never crossed hot words; married couples with other-man and other-woman difficulties; married couples who clash continuously about bills, budget and expenses—these are presented in "Double Harness," co-starring Ann Harding and William Powell at the Studio theater.

The trials and tribulations of two young couples are traced. Miss Harding and Powell comprise one team, and Lucile Browne and George Meeker the other. Their difficulties interlock, but the co-stars' problems are forgotten. A marriage race, a vixenish widow, and business complications are situations with which they cope in amusing and dramatic sequences of romance, love, intrigue and comedy.

GLORIA STUART IS 'THE GIRL IN 419'

"The Girl in 419," featuring James Dunn and Gloria Stuart, opened at the Roxy theater today.

The film is set in the police emergency division of a big-city hospital. Its action takes place against the background of excitement, humor, pathos and tragedy.
