Mrs. Addie Haswell of this city, today received word from Hutchinson, Kas., that her step-mother, Mrs. Eugenia Symcox, 85, had burned to death in her home there January 2.

Mrs. Symcox made her home with a son in Hutchinson and was down stairs alone at the time of the tragedy. She had built a fire in the stove, and later returning to tend it, caught her clothes on fire when she opened the door. She was dead when her members of the household found her.

DR. LELAND NOE DIES AFTER OPERATION IN FRISCO, BURIAL HERE

Dr. Leland Noe, about 34, San Francisco dentist, and son of Clarence Noe of Medford, died in the bay city Sunday morning, following an operation, according to word received in Medford last night.

Dr. Noe had attended grade school and high school in Medford, and as a member of the old Seventh company, National Guard, fought in the World war with the 165th artillery, and saw action in France.

He was graduated from the University of California at Berkeley, and had been practicing in San Francisco since that time. He is survived by his wife, her two daughters Nancy and Sue, also his father, Clarence Noe of this city.

Dr. Noe had many friends in Medford, and time here often, having spent some time here shortly before Thanksgiving, duck hunting with his father. His mother passed away here last April.

The body will be brought to Medford Wednesday morning, and Christian Science services in charge of George Henselman, will be conducted at the graveside in the Siskiyou Memorial park, immediately after the arrival of the train.

His father, who had remained in San Francisco with his son after the holidays, is expected to arrive here by motor Tuesday.

Crowds Enjoy Hit With Eddie Cantor Now At Craterian

Capacity crowds greeted the screening of the annual Eddie Cantor musical comedy, this time called "Roman Scandals" at the Craterian theatre yesterday, where the picture is now playing until Thursday night.

Musical and comedy, girls, gags and Eddie Cantor constitute the entertainment backbone of "Roman Scandals." Romantic interest, spectacle, the quick transformation from the hick town West Rome to the ancient Rome of the Caesars, are features not ordinarily associated with musicals.

Action, thrill, a novel in a chariot race, and winds up the picture in a gale of laughter as Eddie races to save his friend with his shoes nailed to the floor of the chariot!

There are innumerable comedy hits in addition to the race that add to the enjoyment of the show. There is Eddie as the royal food-taster and knowing the food he must eat has been poisoned; there is his invasion of the Roman baths and his sudden ejection; and many other sequences equally laugh-provoking.

It is hard to say where Cantor gets the girls for his shows, but he always manages to get the most dazzling of them all for the dance ensembles that were staged by Busby Berkeley. The fact that the picture departs from the usual "stage background" atmosphere and premises its entertainment in ancient Rome, certainly adds to the enjoyment, what with all the musicals we have been having lately.

The songs, of which there are four in the picture, are sung by Eddie himself and by Ruth Etting, who also has a figure that figures in the final analysis.

All in all, it can be readily said that "Roman Scandals" is Eddie Cantor's best, and so far above the ordinary musical comedies that it moves in a class by itself.

Stars Appear In Picture At Holly

Fourteen outstanding film names appear in the cast of "Dinner at Eight," now at the Holly.

The personalities concerned include Marie Dressler, John Barrymore, Wallace Beery, Jean Harlow, Lionel Barrymore, Lee Tracy, Edmund Lowe, Billie Burke, Madge Evans, Jean Hersholt, Katen Morley, Phillips Holmes and May Robson.

Irene Dunne Star Drama For Rialto

If a prosperous husband is loved by his wife, should she give him up to another woman, knowing that his happiness depended entirely upon his release? Or should she hold him, enslave him, live in the luxury of his wealth and position—knowing that he hated every moment of her amug hold upon him?

Naturally, the general answer is yes and no. But each woman knows in her own heart what she would do about the matter.

Irene Dunne, in the stellar feminine portrayal in "If I Were Free," which opens at the Rialto theatre tomorrow in which she co-stars with Clive Brook, is faced with the necessity of knowing the answers, for in this sophisticated screen play her entire life depends upon settlement of this matter.

Miss Dunne's role presents her, not as the wife whom Brook seeks to renounce, but as the "other woman," with Lorraine MacLean the adamant wife. "The Girl Without a Room," a hilarious story of the Paris artists colony and with Charlie Ruggles supplying most of the comedy, plays for the last times tonight at the Rialto on the double feature program which also has Peggy Shannon as the lead in "Deluge."
