LEGION AUXILIARY FOR FOUR-POINT PROGRAM ON VETERANS RELIEF

Medford unit of the American Legion Auxiliary will give its full support to the Legion's demand for just treatment of disabled world war veterans and dependent families, Mrs. Walter Olmscheid, president of the unit, announced today.

She appealed to all eligible women in the city to come into the unit to help establish veterans' benefit on a permanent basis, just to both veterans and the government.

Pointing out that the problem of veterans' care and compensation has come before congress, Mrs. Olmscheid urged enrollment in the auxiliary to give greater strength to the organization's voice when it pleads for fair treatment for the disabled, the widows and the orphans.

The Legion and Auxiliary, said Mrs. Olmscheid, demands for these needy victims of the war will be based on four points:

1. That no war veteran disabled in the line of duty suffer any reduction of those benefits granted such veterans in the world war veterans' act, as in effect prior to March 20, 1933.

2. That hospitalization under federal government auspices be afforded all war veterans and not dishonorably discharged, who require hospital treatment and who are not able to reasonably pay for their own treatment.

3. That perpetuation of service connection for all veterans properly granted such connection under the law in existence prior to March 20, 1933, be recommended.

4. That the benefits provided for dependents of veterans as established in the world war veterans' act be resumed and maintained as the government's policy and that in no event shall widows and dependent children of deceased veterans be without government protection.

Birth Control Hearing Biggest Show in Capital Mary Kelly Discovers

(By Mary Greiner Kelly.)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—(Spl.)—Margaret Sanger's fair-haired boy today is Oregon's Walter Pierce, who is sponsoring the latest birth control bill soon to come before the house. As a former trained nurse, Mrs. Sanger has pulled this battered piece of legislation through many convulsions and major operations during the past decade. Naturally, she is loud in her praises of Oregon's former governor, for lending the necessary support in wheeling it into the 73rd congressional receiving room.

A public hearing on this bill (which strives to raise contraceptives and their publicity from their present bootleg status up to the level of open air respectability) provided the biggest show in Washington today, when a lineup of colorful characters were heard on both sides.

The speakers in favor of Walter's birth control bill were introduced by Mrs. Thomas Hepburn of Hartford, Conn. Yes, you've guessed it. She proved a boomerang in the speech of their very next orator, Rabbi Edward Israel of Baltomore, who felt called upon, in very eloquent wording, to assert that it was not superstition but "the highest sense of morality which prompted the objections" of certain religious groups to the bill.

In fact, so long did Rabbi Israel dwell upon the fine, ethical standards of those who believed contraceptives wrong, that Mrs. Sanger's disciples in the front row were obviously sorry that they had selected this loquacious gentleman as their main speaker.

The star speaker against the bill, and the first to be heard, was Father Charles E. Coughlin, famous radio priest of Detroit. And say, does this man cause a sensation! His brisk entrance into the chamber was greeted by cheers and prolonged handclapping. Slipping quietly into a chair at the head of the table (the other speakers had all stood) he proceeded to talk just to the committee, in a quiet, conversational tone.

Father Charles E. Coughlin, Detroit radio priest, shown giving his views on birth control at a recent public hearing conducted by a house committee.

Is Katharine's mother, and looks a great deal like the movie star—same high cheek bones, grey eyes, auburn hair (sprinkled with grey).

She likes to expound upon the "noble courage" of Margaret Sanger, but she'd rather talk about her famous offspring, which she did freely in an interview during recess. Katharine, strangely enough, was one of six children. But, my dear, her entrance into this world (as well as that of her five brothers and sisters) was scientifically timed and eugenically spaced.

Margaret Sanger, of course, was the first speaker for the bill. She is a small, very thin, very nervous looking woman, with pale, grey eyes and iron grey hair. She tells, proudly, of her eight much publicized jailings, during her career of spreading the gospel of birth control.

Everything was going along in routine manner at the hearing, with physicians and other speakers, in favor of the bill, presenting their arguments, when one of the congressional committee begged to ask a question.

He wanted to know if there weren't a large percentage of people in the country who objected to such a piece of legislation, on the grounds of morality.

The very positive woman who held the floor at the time said: "No—not on grounds of morality. I believe some would object to it on grounds of superstition."

This started a little fireworks, and

But some of the things he said (and believe me he calls a spade just that) had the Sanger disciples on their feet in a chorus of boos a couple of times.

After he made the startling statement that what this country needed was not less but more "hungry mouths to feed" (this prompted one outburst of Sanger boos) he went on in his clear-cut way to prove his point. He brought out the fact that the present economic ills are not due to overproduction of children, but under-consumption of food products, due to faulty distribution.

He pointed out also that the Slavic races were so far in the ascendancy and the Anglo-Saxon and Celtic races so far in the descendancy, that in 100 years from now "a white man will be an oddity in our nation."

He was followed by numerous physicians and statistical experts, whose testimony was aimed to counterbalance that on the opposite side.

Among the group one of the most interesting was Canon Sheafe Chase of the Baptist church, who objected to the bill because it was "so loosely drawn it would admit of all sorts of evils not openly apparent in the casual reading of it,' 'and because it assumed "men were brutes and animals," against whom women had to be protected.

Another colorful speaker was Congresswoman Mary Norton of New Jersey, who made a plea for the "old-fashioned mother," and referred to the bill as "Mrs. Sanger's commercial scheme."

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription relieved me of all pains and I was soon vigorous and healthy."

JOHNNY AND LUPE CAN'T GET ALONG

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 24.—(AP)—The Examiner said today that Johnny Weismuller, swimmer-actor, and Lupe Velez, Mexican film actress, who were married secretly last October in Las Vegas, Nev., had decided on a separation.

Clashes of temperament were attributed as the causes of disagreements between the couple.

Weismuller was expected to leave Miss Velez' Beverly Hills home today, the actress saying she and her husband had quarreled continually.

"I guess it's Hollywood," she was quoted. "It's no use. Johnny and I, we fight, we fight. It's fifty-fifty. I don't put the blame on him. I don't put the blame on myself. We just cannot get along together."

COUNTY RECEIVES BIDS FOR SUPPLY OF GAS AND OILS

Bids of seven oil companies of this district to furnish Jackson county gasoline and fuel oils the coming year, were submitted this morning to the county court. Representatives of all the oil companies serving this section were present.

The purchase of the supplies is on the competitive basis and will be awarded to the lowest bidder. Announcement of the award will be made as soon as the county court figures out the various bids.

The maximum requirements of the county for the year are placed at 60,000 gallons of gasoline, a decided drop from last year. The gasoline usage would not run so high but a maximum amount nets a lower price. The amount is light compared with years when the county vehicular machinery was used heavily for nine months of the year.

Restrictions are also planned for gasoline use. The first five months of last year Jackson county's gasoline bill was heavy, though its road machinery for the most part was idle. The supervision will be closer. The county court last fall had several adjustments with the oil concerns over gasoline bills on the grounds that some of the bills were for gas used in personal and political matters and in excursions to turmoil trials in other counties.

Danenhower, Skipper of Nautilus on Polar Trip, Will Visit Owens Here

SEATTLE, Jan. 24.—(AP)—Commander Sloan Danenhower, who skippered the Sir Hubert Wilkins submarine "Nautilus" on an attempted trip to the North Pole under the ice several years ago, arrived here today from France, accompanied by his wife and daughter Doris. They disembarked from the steamship Wyoming.

Customs officers collected $70 from Danenhower for two $25 cases of champagne.

Mrs. Danenhower, the former Marga Millard of Seattle, has not been here for 23 years. They will leave in a few days for Medford, Ore., where her parents reside.

"France is in excellent condition, as far as unemployment is concerned, but is weeping over the loss of American tourist trade," the submarine expert said. "More than half of the 30,000 Americans have returned home as a result of the low dollar."

Alluding to the Nautilus expedition, Danenhower said: "We were within 500 miles of the pole, and I think the trip could have been completed had not the submarine lost her diving rudders. The idea is all right and I think that the voyage will be made just as soon as the financing problem is solved."

During the past two years the commander has been living in France and working on a new system of propulsion for submarines. He hopes to devise a plan for hydraulic jet propulsion that will do away with propellors.

During the war he was wreckmaster for the United States navy at Brest. He graduated from Annapolis Naval academy in 1907. He resigned from the navy after the war.

Commander and Mrs. Danenhower and daughter are expected here Saturday to be guest of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Owen. Mr. Owen visited them in Portland last week and Mrs. Owen, who is Mrs. Danenhower's mother, talked to her daughter by telephone during the Danenhower's stay in Portland.

Evangelist Archer Emphasizes Prayer At Free Methodist

"The greatest thing anyone can do in this world is to lead a soul to Christ," said Evangelist Archer in his sermon at the Free Methodist revival last evening. "The church must pray, the church must prevail, and bear the burden of lost souls if they are to be brought to Christ," he declared.

Tonight he speaks on the subject: "Why Was I Born?"

You will have a different view of life and its responsibilities if you hear this message.

Meetings will continue each night this week, beginning at 7:30.

KLAMATH LOSES INITIAL BATTLE FOR HOME RULE

Lewelling's decision continued, "that the liquor traffic is one which the legislature has the right to assume is of state-wide importance and the problems which arise from such traffic are beyond the power of local municipalities to solve and regulate compatible with the best interests of the people of the entire state."

Home Rule at Issue.

The decision did not go into the allegation that the act was a violation of the federal constitution, stating the charges were not supported by briefs submitted. The opinion concentrated upon the home-rule clause of the constitution.

Judge Lewelling was not at the court house to announce his decision, but mailed limited copies of the memorandum opinion from his home in Albany and they were handed out by the bailiff here on scheduled time. A few people were present in the court room to hear the decision. The decision to take the case to the state supreme court was made early in the proceedings in order to determine the validity of the act by the highest court.

Constitution Cited.

The principal objection to the act which the plaintiff made was that section 2 of article XI of the state constitution gives to incorporated cities and towns the exclusive power to license and regulate, control, suppress or prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors in such municipality, and that therefore the Knox act, vesting as it does the exclusive power to regulate traffic in intoxicating liquors and especially the exclusive power to sell or license to sell the same, would be invalid.

Judge Lewelling stated as conclusions of the court five propositions, which he declared would be admitted without the necessity of citation to sustain them, as follows:

"1. That the Oregon liquor control act is a criminal statute.

"2. That the legislature in enacting the same exercised the police power of the state vested in it.

"23. That the sovereign power of the state is vested in the legislative assembly and also reserved to the people by the use of the initiative.

"4. That municipal corporations can only exercise the police power of the state in so far as the same has been delegated to them either by the constitution or by the law-making power of the state, and then only to the extent and in the manner prescribed or limited by such grant or authority.

"5. That the courts are bound to persume the constitutionality of an enactment of the legislature until every reasonable doubt of its validity has been removed."

City Rights Unrepealed.

The plaintiff contended, the opinion stated, that the exclusive right of cities to regulate liquor had not been repealed, and that it was merely held in abeyance or suspended during the period from the repeal of local option until repeal of the prohibition laws, thus restoring this power to the cities.

"The court does not deem it necessary to pass upon the question of whether or not this provision has been repealed," the judge declared, "for if any reasonable interpretation can be placed upon the law under attack that will make it harmonize with the constitution, it is the duty of the court to give to the same that interpretation."

Cities Can Regulate.

Going further into the power of municipalities, the opinion stated that "cities and towns still have the right to regulate and suppress and prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquor and to pass all ordinances reasonably necessary for that purpose, so long as the same do not declare that to be lawful which the state law under consideration declares to be unlawful. The entire purpose of the exclusive privilege clause was to give cities and towns the power to regulate, and this they still have with the liquor control act in full force.

"Cities and towns may pass regulatory measures pertaining to intoxicating liquor which are more stringent than the provisions of the control liquor act and may even prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquor entirely within such municipality. The control liquor act recognizes this and provides that no liquor store shall be established in any municipality, in which there is a local prohibitory law in effect."
