Dead Crows Scarce—Urging more entries in the grow-killing contest, announced some time ago, the Chamber of Commerce drew attention to the fact today that the dead crows are conspicuous through their absence. The contest, sponsored by the fish and game committee of the Chamber of Commerce, headed by T. E. Daniels, was announced in all newspapers, A. H. Bassett, manager of the chamber, pointed out today, and strong competition is hoped for. The crows have been voted a detriment to other game, particularly quail, and the conservationists are anxious to have rookeries destroyed.

PORTLAND BUTTER ADVANCE FOLLOWS EAST COAST TREND

PORTLAND, Jan. 31.—(AP)—Firmness in the eastern sector, due to weather conditions, along with no appreciable surplus of fresh stock at any point in the country, caused a further advance in the price on butter here. This was a reversal of the trend expected in view of recent California weakness, which was later followed by strength and advances.

Advances on the produce exchange for the late season were in line with the betterment at other points and especially along the Pacific slope. The advances were having the effect of throwing considerable demand from the cheaper sorts into oleomargarine. Advances for the season were in line with the betterment at other points and especially along the Pacific slope.

Reg market trading was at the lower prices first named yesterday by the Pacific Co-ops and later followed nominally by the produce exchange which made its initial former price range.

In general there was no change in live chicken prices for the day. All sorts were in call and receipts continued on a very limited volume basis. Turkey call was unchanged. Shortage of country killed meats was continued along the wholesale way. The shortage of mutton and lamb was suggested with arrival of more goats for the lower grade trade.

Both potatoes and onions continued with a quiet trading tone at the source and locally. Potato shippers were asking full prices but were securing little movement.

AARON SCHOLLARS PASSES, AGED 87

Aaron Schollars, aged resident of Medford, passed away at his home, 953 Dakota street, at 2:40 a. m. Wednesday morning, at the age of 87. He was born at New Albany, Ind. November 8, 1846. In March, 1872, he was married at Xenia, Ill., to Elizabeth Montgomery, who preceded him to the beyond in 1931. To this union were born seven children, six surviving. Mr. Schollars came to Medford 10 years ago from Idaho, but formerly resided in Kansas for 40 years. His death came from a paralytic stroke suffered last Friday. The children left are: James M. and Frederick Schollars of Pollock, Cal.; Kate Villersara, San Francisco; Mrs. C. H. Mosher, Central Point; Edgar A. Schollars and Mrs. Daisy Hamilton of Medford. Funeral services will be held at the Conger chapel at 2:30 p. m. Friday. Interment beside his deceased wife in Medford I. O. O. F. cemetery.

Lew Ayres Appears In Unusual Screen Hit Now At Rialto

"Cross Country Cruise" opened a three-day engagement at the Rialto theater yesterday is the season's cleverest comedy-drama. Lew Ayres and company present a fast-moving screen play which has all the elements of popularity, and they do a grand job of it. For novelty of setting, for snappiness of wise-cracking dialogue, for swiftness of action and for effectiveness of situation, "Cross Country Cruise" is exceptional. The story finds a score of people setting out from New York City on a transcontinental bus which is due to end its trip at San Francisco, and stops are made at many interesting points. Even while the bus is moving, one sees through the open windows authentic views of the country, the side flashing past, and the audience has the feeling of actually having made the trip in company with these interesting people. Lew Ayres has never appeared to better advantage as the young man being sent to his father's lumber camp in California to get him away from girls, and equal praise must be given to the blonde June Knight, with whom he enters upon a romance soon after leaving the starting point. A married man (accompanied by his suspicious wife) with whom June had intended to elope, adds to the complications of the journey, and tragedy overtakes the party before the trip is completed. Hope for Fog's End—Officials at the Medford airport were rejoicing this afternoon over the lift of fog which has blanketed the valley for several days, making it necessary for planes to land at Montague, Cal.

Ann Harding Star Of Dramatic Film On Craterian Bill

Delving into the realm where nature is improved upon by the modern art of plastic surgery, "The Right to Romance" starring Ann Harding, won appreciation and applause at its premiere at the Craterian theater, where it plays until tomorrow night. Ann Harding walks off with new histrionic honors in a marvelous portrayal of the character of Dr. Simmons, at whose heart love and romance seem always tugging, as her fame and fortune prove chains that bind her to professional duty. When a gallant and handsome youth looked Dr. Simmons straight in the eye and failed to see a woman, she decided that love is still the most important thing in a woman's life. Miss Harding is provided with one of the most intriguing roles as the famous lady plastic surgeon who forsakes her career with alacrity when romance and marriage beckon. Later she finds bitter disillusionment and begins to doubt the wisdom of thrusting aside fame for love when she discovers her impetuous young husband in a compromising situation with a former "fiat". The drama reaches a startling and highly emotional climax when the lady surgeon is called upon to perform a delicate operation on the beautiful features of her love rival.
