plus 10 per cent. With the known packout we could easily arrive at the total number of boxes each town under control would have to take. Our next problem was to decide the being held in the city jail by city police for investigation. According to officers, the boys were found in the hangar at the Fred Sanders place on Crater Lake avenue, which they had allegedly broken into.

on we moved it up almost two weeks. We decided that no longer would this district hold the bag for California, particularly since they have decided they have a Bartlett that can be held in storage.

"Keeping in mind our rate of movement and through the cooperation of all shippers in this district we headed for a cleanup on December 15, knowing that this was impossible but we did practically end the deal on January 1, which the committee thought ideal.

"I have heard it said that the committee erred in not holding more cars for the end of the season at which time the market jumped about $1.00. In defense of our control plan this past season allow me to state that we started out with an 'orphan,' a variety that did not stand any too high in the eyes of the consumer. We had a fairly large crop, 329,000 boxes from this district, unknown weather conditions, unknown packing quality and probably most important, an experiment in marketing never before tried. I say 'most important' because we did not know whether the eastern trade would take kindly to a 'control plan'—the name itself implies 'hot potatoes,' something to keep your hands away from—the trade. And the fact that we were determined to offer only ripe fruit—that alone spelled dynamite, not only to wholesalers but to some receivers. All of these made it necessary to sell heavily on what we thought was a fair market and not speculate on weather conditions, attitude of the trade, etc. The fact that we had an advance at the end of the season proves to me that the control plan along with a conditioning program, is essential to the success of one of the best varieties raised in this district."

"Lead arsenate is still our codling moth insecticide," stated Prof. R. H. Robinson of Oregon State college, the next speaker, whose talk on the subject of 'Spray Preparations and Their Use' was heard with much interest. In answering the question of what is properly and improperly made lime sulphur, Professor Robinson said that only high grade lime should be used, that it should be free of all impurities, that care should be taken in the boiling process, and that the sulphur should not only be pure but neither too coarse nor too fine.

Further instructions considered of much importance by those present included the following: In the boiling tank the lime should be slaked with hot water, the sulphur thrown in during slaking, the kettle hot when this takes place and the mixture boiled three-quarters of an hour. During boiling, the tank should be covered with boards and contents stirred continuously. In using home made emulsion, spraying should be done thoroughly, but over-drenching avoided.

During the open forum which followed the formal program, growers received information on nicotine and tank mix sprays and quick breaking oils for dormant use. At this time, Dr. G. B. Dean announced that the league was cooperating with Oregon State college in a research program for by-products.

Paul Scherer of the Bartlett pear commodity committee, spoke briefly of the several conferences which had been held recently for the purpose of working out control plans, such as elimination and proper allocation. Two groups would be formed within California and Oregon, he stated, with canners and producers to determine pears to be packed from each district. Growers would then decide upon the proper control plan for the Pacific coast, according to Mr. Scherer's report.

A motion to pass resolutions of regret upon the death of W. E. Brayton and Reginald J. Earl, members of the league, was considered and acted upon.

New directors for the coming year were unanimously elected as follows: One year term, Gordon E. Kernshaw; two year term, Ray Ward and Everett Brayton; three year term, Harry Rosenberg, G. B. Dean, E. W. Carlton, Corning Kenly, Maxwell Luther and J. C. Barnes.

SEVEY TO REPAIR CITY JAIL HAVOC

John Sevey, 29, local youth, who is a CCC worker at the Applegate camp, admitted to City Judge A. D. Curry Saturday that he had prompted Herbert Monroe, 19, CCC worker from Garberry creek, to break out the window panes in the jail Friday night. Both were being held on charges of being drunk in a public place.

Sevey said that he was responsible for the 63 small panes being broken, and as a result, he will be required to pay $10 a month until the windows are paid for and also $10 fine, as he entered a guilty plea to the drunkenness charge.

Monroe is to report to city officials Monday morning to work on the streets five days in payment for his fine.

John Smith, 23, also arrested early Saturday morning, forfeited $10 bail when he failed to appear in city court Saturday. Jack Woodham, local man, was fined $10 and given time to pay.

Robert D. Ryland, 23, who Thursday night was released from the city jail after completing a five-day sentence for being drunk in a public place, was arrested again Friday night on a similar charge. Ryland was ordered to leave town for 30 days, or work on the city street for 10 days. Ryland claimed he would have a job here in 30 days, and promised the judge he would leave town until then.
