

HUNTERS PARADISE FOUND IN COUNTRY BILL CODY LOVED

Big Horn Basin, Wild Region East of Yellowstone Park, Draws Host of Sportsmen — Game Is Increasing

CODY, Wyo.—(AP)—From the happy hunting ground to which he has gone, Buffalo Bill may look down to see that his beloved big game country still is a hunter's paradise.

In the past year more hunters visited the Big Horn basin, the wild country east of Yellowstone park, which the famous frontiersman considered the finest hunting spot in the world, than in any season for the past 15 years. Game wardens and guides in fact the number of game animals that abound in the region has been steadily on the increase since 1916.

Prominent among the successful hunters was Ulen de Schooten, Belgian consul at San Francisco, who with Mrs. de Schooten and Mr. and Mrs. Jean Wittouch of Brussels bagged four bull elk and a buck deer. De Schooten's elk was the largest shot during the year, with a 66-inch spread and horns measuring 10 inches around the burr.

Remember Cody Tales. The party hunted in the same territory where Buffalo Bill (Col. William F. Cody) guided Prince Albert I of Monaco, the aide-de-camp of Count Beret, in 1913, on the renowned hunter's last big game hunt. The stories Buffalo Bill told while in Europe with his Wild West show are held responsible for continued visits of European noblemen to the Cody big game country after 20 years.

Two truck loads of elk, moose and antelope heads were shipped from the valley ranch this season to the homes of big game hunters. One shipment included full carcasses of three moose, three antelope and three elk to be used by James L. Clark, director, for a Wyoming exhibit in the Museum of Natural History in New York.

At various seasons of the year the big game hunter in the Big Horn basin may shoot elk, deer, mountain sheep, antelope and grizzly, black and brown bear. Smaller game includes bobcats, coyotes and mountain lions. The bird hunter brings down grouse, sage hens, pheasants, ducks and geese, while for the angler there is an abundance of fine trout fishing.

Damage Hay Crops. This season deer became so thick in the South Fork section that they seriously damaged the settlers' hay crops. Following complaints from one rancher about the "peaky critters," the game warden went daily to drive them out of the hay fields into the mountains. Each night, however, they'd come back, and a 12-foot fence didn't hinder them.

There probably is no truth to the tall tale of Ned Frost, noted guide, that a coyote stole and wore all season a hunter's red cap to keep from being mistaken for a deer. It is a fact, however, that Hills Jordan, game warden, covered his horse—most and rest—with five yards of red cloth, to keep from being shot at. It worked.

BEAVERS DEFEAT IDAHOANS 40-14

CORVALLIS, Ore., Feb. 13.—(AP)—The Oregon State college basketball team today counted its fourth consecutive comeback victory in the Coast conference north division race and hoped to reanother win here tonight from University of Idaho.

The Beavers gained an all-important notch by defeating the Vandals, 40 to 14, here last night. Another victory is vital tonight if the Beavers remain in the running for the conference championship which University of Washington has all but salted away.

Looking more and more like a well-oiled machine, the Beavers pulled out of an early five-five tie and led 21 to 8 at half-time.

McDonald and O'Connell led the Beaver scoring with nine points each.
