HORACE MANNING KILLS R. W. HORAN IN OFFICE FIGHT

Manning was being questioned in an effort to discover a motive for his actions. The attorneys were not known to be enemies.

Says Duel Fought

Manning said there had been a duel in the office and investigators discovered two bullets in a bookcase. The shots were believed from the gun held in Horan's hand inasmuch as both revolvers had two empty shells in the chambers.

Horan was hit twice. One bullet struck his chest and entered the heart. The other shattered his left arm.

Manning telephoned Rex McMillan, deputy sheriff at the county jail, telling him to "come and get me."

"Ralph and I have had an argument and there has been some shooting. He took a couple of shots at me and I shot him. I'm afraid he is dead," Manning told McMillan.

The veteran trial attorney waited for the officers in the anteroom. The shooting occurred in Manning's private office as the two men apparently conversed across a desk.

Killed Instantly

Both Manning's and Horan's chairs were pushed aside and Horan's body was found face down directly in front of the desk. Dr. George Adler, coroner, said he died instantly.

The legislator had just returned from Klamath agency where his wife is recovering from a serious illness at her parents' home. A doctor and a special nurse left for the agency to inform her of the tragedy and it was feared she was near a state of collapse.

Horan coming here from Tennessee six years ago to join his father who died a year ago, was one of the most prominent lawyers in the county. He was elected to the state legislature in 1922.

Several years ago Horan was a member of the Manning, McCulloch, Driscoll and Horan law firm. He is survived by his wife, a son Tommy, 3, and a daughter a few months of age.

Manning has a daughter, Elizabeth, living in New York City. He also has a son James teaching school at Silverton and a son Horace living here.

Warner Baxter in "As Husbands Go"

Rachel Crothers, whose pen is responsible for such outstanding successes as "When Ladies Meet" and "Let Us Be Gay," once again comes to the forefront with her latest endeavor, "As Husbands Go." The picture makes its appearance at the Craterian theatre tomorrow and will play there for two days. Warner Baxter's starring role in the film is heralded as being his best and most suave to date.

Rachel Crothers has that rare knack of sketching her characters from life and having them say things that everyone thinks.

On a pleasure jaunt in Paris, a young wife and her middle-aged friend find unexpected romance. Before returning home, the young wife informs the young Englishman, that she will secure a divorce from her husband. Upon her return, her husband's charming sweetness is impossible for her to penetrate. The husband welcomes her lover with open arms. The Englishman's admiration for the husband becomes so great, that he feels his presence is an injustice and so he departs. The young wife realizing her grave mistake returns once more to the love of her husband.

Warner Baxter has for his leading lady, Helen Vinson, who gave a splendid performance in "The Power and The Glory." Warner Oland and Catharine Doucet of stage fame, are also in the cast.

"The Private Life of Henry VIII" closes its engagement tonight.

JUDGE WILL HEAR PLEAS TODAY ON NEW INDICTMENTS

Pleas of men indicted by the last grand jury will be heard late this afternoon by Circuit Judge H. D. Norton, who today resumed hearing of Jackson county court matters, after a month's session in Grants Pass.

The court has named Attorney M. O. Wilkins as counsel for Robert Minor, indicted for attempted burglary, and entered a plea of not guilty. Minor is charged with attempting to enter the Strang drug store through the skylight.

John Weidman, charged with grand larceny, had Attorney Newton Chaffey named by the court to defend him. Weidman also faces a federal liquor charge.

LeRoy Wright, indicted for liquor law violation, is also expected to enter a plea today. His partner, Philip Hale, has entered a plea of guilty. Wright is the father of nine children and bears the reputation of being a hard working and industrious man. He lives on the Old Stage road, and is at liberty on bonds provided by neighbors.

The criminal docket for the term starting Monday, February 27, will be arranged as soon as all pleas have been made.

Not guilty pleas have been entered by Alfred Poston of the Pinehurst district, charged with threatening to commit an assault with a deadly weapon during a dispute over game laws with a state policeman last fall.

Poston is a well-known resident of the eastern part of the county.

James L. Garrett, charged with assault with a deadly weapon, will also face trial. Garrett is alleged to have shot a woman in the leg when she attempted to leave with a jug containing whiskey during a party.

Garrett lives on the Butte Falls road. No disposition has yet been made of the case of James L. Coleman, indicted for non-support and forgery.

The latter charge has been dismissed. Coleman offers to return to Arkansas with his wife and three children, where he claims he has a farm. He has been residing in the Central Point district the past three years.

DEBATING TEAMS OF THREE CITIES MEET THIS WEEK

With the Southern Oregon district title at stake Medford high school debate team will meet Grants Pass and Ashland in a series of four debates tomorrow and Thursday.

This triangular contest is held annually as the first step in an elimination process to decide the state debate championship. Tomorrow afternoon at 2 the Medford negative, composed of Irene Stubblefield and Betty Thordike, will meet the Grants Pass affirmative. The debate will be held in the high school auditorium. Tomorrow evening the Medford affirmative, composed of Dolph James and Cleo Hicks, goes to Grants Pass to meet the negative team of the latter school.

On Thursday the series will be completed with two debates against Ashland. Thursday afternoon the Medford affirmative will meet the Ashland; while in the evening, the Medford negative, composed of Irene Stubblefield and Mildred Drury, will meet the Ashland affirmative. The debate Thursday evening will be held in the high school auditorium, starting at 8.

Prof. Waifred Dahlberg of the University of Oregon will serve as critic judge. He not only will decide each individual contest but also the district winner. Last year Medford not only won the district final but also the state championship. The Perry twins, Frances and Elizabeth, have been graduated but three members of the squad last year remain, namely, Dolph James, Cleo Hicks and Irene Stubblefield.

The public is urged to attend the debate in the local auditorium and hear an interesting discussion on the question: "Resolved, that the U. S. Should Adopt the Essential Features of the British System of Radio Control and Management."
