

JUBILEE LEADER CONGRATULATES PIONEERS' CHIEF

Grand Ball and Celebration Held in Portland Marks 75th Anniversary of Oregon's Entry to Statehood

Congratulations were telegraphed Wednesday by E. C. (Jerry) Jerom, chairman of Oregon's Diamond Jubilee celebration to Mrs. Bertha S. Smith, president of the Sons and Daughters of Oregon Pioneers organization...

The event is the theme of a week's festivities in Medford and Jacksonville next June from the 3rd to the 9th—a week filled with so much activity that it promises to be one of the most outstanding celebrations in the history of the state.

The jubilee is not confined to this city and Jackson county, but has the support of every section of Oregon.

Pioneers supporting The Sons and Daughters of Oregon Pioneers are ardent supporters of next June's activities and will actively participate in the celebration.

The telegram sent by Mr. Jerome is as follows: "Trust your celebration of Oregon's birthday today will be a happy one and regret I cannot be with you. Please convey our best wishes and extend an invitation to everyone to attend Oregon's Diamond Jubilee celebration for which Medford and Jacksonville are official hosts."

Looking back through the years, Oregon was in happy mood 75 years ago yesterday. Banners were flying, street meetings were held, dances continued far into the night and the air was filled with hilarity.

The population of the state at that time hardly reached 50,000, scattered throughout its extensive area, with a large proportion in southern Oregon, one of the heaviest populated districts of the state.

Echoes of Indian war cries which split the Rogue River valley air as late as 1856 were hardly lost on wooded hillside when statehood began a remarkable era of progress for the Empire State.

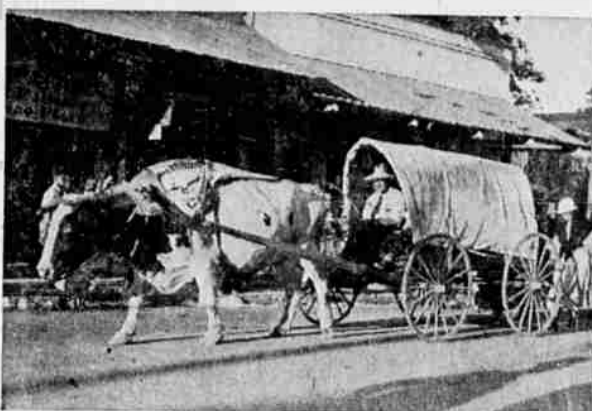

Time brought vast changes. Automobiles were not even imagined as a possibility of a future mode of transportation. Horse flesh was in its hey-day and livery stables were regarded much in the same light then as service stations and garages are today.

Rapid stage coach transportation brought a traveler from Roseburg in three days, and sometimes less over roads which were notorious for their dust in summer and infamously for their oceans of mud in winter.

Bible Students Hear Mitchell's Daily Discussion

Many Sunday school teachers and Bible students from all over the valley are attending the sessions of the Bible conference being held at the Baptist church every evening this week, except Saturday.

Mr. Mitchell's topic Tuesday night, "The Need for the Cross, or Why Should Christ Die? Why Such a Death?" and the answer, "Evil comes from within and defiles the man."

"From Creation to the Cross, God was testing man, so let us hear God's conclusion, Rom. 3:23; Gal. 3:22; Rom. 3:22, which also gives the reason for God's conclusion. 'What I am,' is found in Rom. 3:10-12, and 'what I do,' in Rom. 3:13-17. The cause of these conditions is given in Rom. 3:18.

$12,500,000 FOR ROADS AVAILABLE IN CURRENT YEAR

SALEM, Feb. 15.—(AP)—The state of Oregon will have $12,500,000 available this year for construction of roads and bridges, the largest amount for such work since 1921, Leslie M. Scott announced today following his study of the annual report submitted by R. H. Baldock, state highway engineer.

Scott, chairman of the highway commission, stated that of this fund the federal government would provide more than $2,000,000 for bridges, and more than $8,000,000 for improvements of primary roads. State funds to be expended for improvement other than maintenance work would total $1,515,000.

Baldock's report showed that during the year the state highway commission had direct supervision over 235 miles of new construction work and 535 miles of resurfacing and widening projects. Of the new work 214 miles were on primary highways and 21 miles on secondary highways.

Bonded indebtedness of the highway commission, now at $27,041,730, was being retired at the rate of about $2,000,000 annually. The annual interest at present is about $1,250,000. The bonded indebtedness in 1923 was $38,393,350.

Savings in estimated expenditures set out in the budget for 1933 was $688,371 in administration, maintenance and state funds for construction. The report showed net revenues exceeded the estimates by $246,911, leaving a year's surplus of $935,282 remaining on hand. There was a balance of $266,000 the year before, totaling a total of $1,161,282.
