APPELATE UNIT TO GIVE ONE-ACT PLAY SATURDAY EVENING

A school board disagreement between two sweethearts can cause untold grief in the future, particularly when the girl concerned is the school teacher, and it is this grief, beset with hilarious complications, which forms the plot of "Kidnapping Betty," the one act comedy to be presented by the Appellate Home Extension Unit at the Appellate hall Saturday, February 17th, at 8:30 p. m.

The play entered in the annual county dramatic contest, which is sponsored by the Jackson County Recreation club, opens with the telling of the "latest" by the village gossip, and moves on with a swift tempo to the kidnapping scene and climax, ending with a pleasant anti-climax.

The cast includes Mrs. Lane Offenberg, Mrs. Josephine Clute, Mrs. Lee Port, Miss Maude Puel, Eugene Korte, Fred Clute and Edward Warden. Mrs. A. N. Krouse is the director.

Of the three groups into which the county has been divided in the contest, Appellate recently has been grouped to compete with Bellview and Oak Grove, the winner to compete in the finals at the Medford Junior high school Saturday, February 24th. The resulting prize play will be presented in state competition at the Home Interstate Conference at Corvallis the last of February.

The public is assured an enjoyable evening with the Appellate unit Saturday. The play will be preceded by several vocal numbers and readings by Appellate people, and will be followed with an old-time dance with music furnished by George and Bill Purcell. A nominal admission fee will be charged, and sandwiches and coffee will be sold at midnight.

ANCIENT TEMPLE IS UNEARTHED BY ARCHAEOLOGISTS

LEPTIS MAFNA, North Africa.—(UP)—A temple with an inscription in Neo-Phoenician (about 2000 B. C.) on its architecture, containing valuable information about its foundation, is the latest discovery of a series of finds recently made by Italian archaeologists here.

The ruins of this ancient city have been explored and excavated practically since the Italian occupation of Tripoli in 1911. The rich archaeological harvest these have yielded thus far has by no means been exhausted, a score of untiring scholars now working here have declared.

The systematic excavations have led, in the past, to the unearthing of extensive remains of the city, including temples, baths, forums, public buildings and private houses.

A new enthusiastic drive on the part of resident archaeologists has resulted in the discovery of the temple whose cells, it is reported, were built with slabs of yellow Numidian marble in such good state of preservation that its restoration is assured. The columns of the pronaos, in white marble with Corinthian capitals, were found intact.

Leptis Magna, also known as Neapolis, is situated on the coast of North Africa, between the Byrtes and the mouth of the Cygnus river. Originally a Phoenician colony with a flourishing commerce, although it possessed no harbor, it formed with Abthorium and Oea the African Tri-polis, or "three cities." The Romans made it a colony and it was the birthplace of the Emperor Septimius Severus and co-ruler of the empire until 308 A. D. who met his almost ruined by an attack from a Libyan tribe. Justinian restored it, but the Arabian invasion completed its destruction.

Numerous sculptures of great value dating from the first century, during the reigns of Julius and Augustus, were also found recently. Many of the busts brought to light are broken, but their restoration is possible, because very few of the fragments are missing.

GOLD HOARDERS OFFER MANY CURIOUS ALIBIS

ST. LOUIS.—(UP)—Many and varied are the alibis offered by holders of gold coins when they turn them into banks here.

One woman, with $300 in gold, appeared at a bank and said she did not know she had the gold. She said her husband left an envelope when he died and directed that she must not open it for five years.

Curiously, she opened it recently, she said, and found the gold.

Another holder of a $5 gold piece said it represented his first earnings as a newsboy.

A gold coin which had been in a family for more than a generation was stripped of its sentimental value and mixed with other coins of similar denominations when the bank clerk insisted that "all gold coins" must be turned in. The owner reluctantly complied.

CHINESE SELL WHEAT PURCHASED ON CREDIT

PORTLAND, Feb. 15.—(AP)—The Chinese government was today officially reported as selling wheat obtained on long time credit from the United States government.

While this was not the first time that cargoes of Pacific coast wheat have been reported sold by the Chinese government to other buyers after China had been financed in the original purchase by the United States treasury, the latest development caused considerable talk in the trade here today, especially among those seeking cancellation of the current agreement.
