Neck Broken by Yawning in Bed DALLAS, Tex.—(UP)—L. W. De Young, Dallas, head of publicity and advertising for the Southwestern Bell telephone company in Texas, sustained a broken neck from yawning and stretching in bed.

De Young awoke, stretched himself with his head slightly to the right, and heard a slight snapping noise, after which he was unable to turn his head to the right past dead center. Several days later he had an X-ray taken.

"The sixth cervical vertebra, fractured in two places," was the final verdict. The victim must wear a leather apparatus designed to hold his head and neck rigid for about four weeks before he will be able to wiggle his head again, attendants said.

Platinum Blonde Period Ended in View of Experts PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—(UP)—The platinum blonde era is ended and with it the bad for trick waves, fantastic wigs and necklength "bobs."

This was agreed upon by 1,600 hairdressers attending the annual Hair Stylist Show of the Philadelphia Beauty Show Owners' association. The smartly-coiffed woman this year will be natural and practical, spokesmen said, and a "thousand times more attractive than she was in the past couple of years."

The trend toward simplicity was explained by Joseph De Silvia. "Exaggerated coiffures are out," he said. "They took time and money—and the average woman is short of both at present. She can't afford to go to a hairdresser every other day. When she gets a wave it has to stay in. A wave that will do for business has to be suitable for evening also. Through force of necessity, to say nothing of beauty, we have created a wave that will last for a least a week."

"We encourage dyed hair. A woman can seldom afford to continue in business if her hair is turning gray. Gray hair should be dyed, but it should be the original, natural tone of the hair, not some other shade."

The platinum era, however, is definitely out. Long bobs are out, it was explained, because women refuse to try any longer to sleep with the wire curlers that are necessary.

Windblown bobs will match the windblown trend of dress design.

AUSTRALIA, FIRST LAND DEPRESSED, NOW RECOVERING

ITHACA, N. Y.—(UP)—Australia, the first country to feel the depression, is now further on the road to recovery than any other nation.

Dr. D. B. Copeland, professor of commerce at the University of Melbourne, said in a lecture here.

Dr. Copeland, who was a fiscal adviser to the Australian government during the depression and also economic adviser to his country's delegation at the London economic conference last summer, said that the adoption two years ago of a monetary policy similar to that of the United States was responsible for the recovery in Australia.

"We didn't start two years too late, like some other countries," he said. "We started at a place where there was no difficulty in telling which road to take. That road was depreciation of the currency; price of gold is a better tactical way of putting it."

Soon after raising the price of gold to correspond to 488 an ounce in United States currency, Dr. Copeland said, Australia obtained better exports and a better national income. Export prices are now only 25 per cent below their 1928 level, he said.

Bank deposits and credits are now higher in Australia than at any time before the depression, Dr. Copeland declared. He added that government revenue automatically increased without a corresponding increase in government costs, which were pared down to a minimum during the depression.

Consequently, he said, Australia was able last October to declare a substantial reduction in taxation.
